By "TELEGRAPH" STAFF REPORTER

This morning, in the pitch darkness that precedes the dawn I witnessed one of the most startling take-offs in the history of Kai Tak Airport.

Almost beside himself with anxiety at the delay that threatened to rob him of the most astonishing distance record ever attempted by one man, M. Andre Japy, the French aviator who has already made history by his flight from Paris to Hongkong, decided shortly after 5 a.m. to take the biggest chance of his career.

A stiff northerly wind that whistled down the mountains in the background of Kai Tak had for ten hours, made suicidal any attempt to take off.

Shortly after 4.30 a.m., the wind became gusty instead of continuous. M. Japy decided to risk all by taking off during one of the all-too-brief spells of calm.

Two Airport officials, a constable and one lone newspaperman were the only spectators.

Their hearts stood still as, engine wide open, the heavily laden red plane bumped across the entire length of the field—a distance of 800 yards—without rising.

In the darkness—relieved by nothing but half-a-dozen guiding flares and the lights of the plane—it seemed to the spectators that the two wheels of the machine were still on the ground as the plane went over the sea-wall.

For two hundred yards, the plane was less than six feet above sea-level as it skimmed across the harbour.

Then, its one propeller gripping, it commenced to rise, and within five minutes had disappeared from sight.

Greatly Overweight

When the plane was wheeled out of the hangar at Kai Tak it was 1,200 lbs. overweight, a danger made necessary by the large amount of petrol needed to carry it from Hongkong to Tokyo—a distance of approximately 2,000 miles—without refuelling.

At 4 a.m., despairing of the decrease in the strength of wind necessary to permit a take-off in any direction except by flying into the mountains, M. Japy decided to dump 70 gallons of his precious fuel, and fly to Shanghai to refuel.

He had actually given the order for the fuel to be dumped when the wind became more favourable.

Half an hour later he abandoned the contemplated change of plans and decided to risk a take-off with a full load.

Troubles Ahead

Even now, however, his troubles are not over. Doubt exists regarding the weather conditions over the East China Sea. M. Japy told me, a few minutes before he took off, that he had decided to follow the Chinese coastline to Fouchow before deciding whether to land at Shanghai or to attempt the hazardous 2,000 mile sea crossing from Fouchow to Tokyo.

If he decides on the latter course, he expects to arrive at Tokyo at 6 p.m. this evening.

If, however, weather conditions make it advisable to land at Shanghai, M. Japy expects to reach the northern city at about 9.30 a.m., and to arrive at Tokyo at about 8.30 p.m.

His flight from Paris to Hongkong is one of the most remarkable solo efforts in the history of aviation. He left the French capital at 8 a.m. on Monday and 56 hours later was in Hongkong.

During the whole time he had only 15 minutes sleep. He originally intended departing at 8 p.m. last night for Tokyo, but even the small reserve of time such an early departure would have necessitated did not drive him to rest. For fully two hours after his arrival yesterday, M. Japy went carefully over every part of his machine and supervised the refuelling, carried out by the Shell organisation.

Then, and not until then, would he consent to snatch a little sleep. He was out at the aerodrome again at 7.45 p.m., and his disappointment at the sudden northerly wind that made his departure impossible was intense.

It was not until 10 p.m. that he would consent to return to rest. He was back again at the airport at 2.15

AUSTRIANS TO RE-ARM TO TEETH

FARM PRODUCTS FOR GERMAN WEAPONS ENVOY LEAVES FOR BERLIN

Vienna, Nov. 18.

An economic agreement with Germany, under which large-scale re-arming would be effected, is being sought by the Foreign Secretary, Dr. Guido Schmidt, who left for Berlin today. It is considered significant that the Austrian Minister is accompanied by Freiherr von Papen, the German Minister at Vienna, on the first official state visit of an Austrian Cabinet Minister to Germany in four years.

It is the proposal of the Austrian Government that Germany should buy Austria's surplus dairy and timber products, of which Germany is much in need, and sell in return war planes, tanks and heavy artillery.

Hitherto, the low prices Germany has offered for Austrian goods, for example, two pence a pound for butter, have caused a deadlock in negotiations, but it is believed that Dr. Schmidt's mission will eliminate all obstacles.

Austria's determination to re-arm to the teeth is evidenced by her introduction of conscription in April, the increase by 60 per cent. in her army expenditure and the declaration of her right to re-arm on November 12.—Reuter.

a.m., and remained there until his departure.

Astonishing Speed

The astonishing rapidity with which he has crossed the world since his departure from Paris on Monday is like a Magic Carpet story.

He flew direct from Paris to Damascus on Monday. Staying at Damascus only long enough to refuel, he hopped off for Karachi, where he arrived at dawn on Tuesday. At 7 a.m. he was again in the air, arriving at Allahabad late in the afternoon.

Snatching only 15 minutes sleep while his plane was being refuelled, M. Japy departed from Allahabad at 8 p.m., and arrived at Hanoi, after a remarkable direct flight across country, at 10.50 a.m. yesterday. He was in the air again at 12.30 p.m., completing the flight to Hongkong in 104 minutes actual flying time, easily a record.

He lost half-an-hour between Allahabad and Hanoi, by overshooting his mark.

Packed With Petrol

The machine M. Japy is flying is his own. It is a Caudron Simca low-winged monoplane, fitted with a Renault engine, and is capable of over 200 m.p.h. The machine is similar in many respects to the De

SPAIN'S CAPITAL ABLAZE

MADRID TORMENTED BY BOMBERS

FEARFUL TOLL IN RAIDS

Madrid, Nov. 18.

More fires are raging in Madrid as a result of insurgent air attacks during the night. These led to the destruction of the printing works of the newspaper Libertad and the Duke of Alba's palace, wherein were art treasures of incalculable worth hitherto carefully protected.

The Government reports no change in the position in the University City area where fighting continues.

The streets of Madrid are in ruins, its palaces are gutted. Semi-official figures show that 200 were killed and 400 wounded in yesterday's bombardment alone. These bring the admitted casualties for the week to 500 dead and 1,200 wounded, the majority of them women and children.

The Puerta del Sol, the very heart of Madrid, is burning. The tramlines in the area are torn up and the underground station is filled with debris. The market district is destroyed and tongues of flame are still shooting from the offices of La Libertad.

Planes have dropped pamphlets threatening to intensify the raids tonight unless the city capitulates.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

BIG GAIN IN POWER OF R.A.F.

STILL FAR SHORT OF OBJECTIVE

BIG BALLOON BARRAGE

London, Nov. 18.

A big increase in the strength of the Home units of the Royal Air Force since May last year is shown in the latest figures available.

In May, 1935, Home squadrons numbered 53, with 580 first-line machines, whereas to-day they total 89, with 992 first-line machines.

These figures show that the Air Force has made a good start towards reaching the limit aimed at, namely, 120 Home squadrons, with 1,750 first-line machines.

The Air Ministry's plan provides for the erection of 50 new aerodromes, of which 30 are already in course of construction. The majority of these are situated in the south and south-east of England.

It is understood that the new balloon barrage will considerably strengthen London's aerial defences, and they are expected to prove of great advantage in cloudy weather, when it is difficult for fighting planes to locate bombers.—Reuter.

"This Town Is Poor But Loyal"

KING WELCOMED TO SOUTH WALES

AMID SCENE OF DESOLATION

London, Nov. 18.

"This town is poor but loyal."

This touching message, stretched across the grey stone front of a broken-down cottage, epitomised the welcome which the poor folk of Dowlais gave His Majesty the King when he visited to-day what has been called "the blackest spot in South Wales."

There is scarcely a family here which is not on the dole or public relief.

When the King arrived at the great, gaunt shell of the derelict steel factory, which formerly was the mainstay of the town's existence, with a wage bill of £30,000, he was greeted by wild cheers.

His car passed under the famous Coal Arch erected at the entrance to the factory at the time of His Late Majesty's visit, when the town was in the heyday of its capacity, two years before the Great War.

To-day the new King walked amid scenes of desolation, where rusting factory chimneys, ovens and furnaces and crumbling masonry bore witness to the poverty of the depressed area of South Wales.

He was accompanied by the former managing-director of the firm which owned the premises.

Another and larger place struck by the hand of misfortune, and which the King has visited, is Merthyrtydfil yet here, as at Dowlais, the loyalty of the suffering population was demonstrated beyond any doubt.—Reuter Special.

TUMULTUOUS RECEPTION

London, Nov. 18.

His Majesty the King was accorded a tumultuous reception in every town and village which he visited during his sixty-mile tour to-day of the distressed areas of South Wales and distressed areas of South Wales.

It was no perfunctory visit. Formalities were almost entirely dispensed with. The King moved about with the people, went into their homes and discussed with them their hardships. During the afternoon it became known that Mr. Malcolm Stewart, whose report, made before he resigned his post as Chief Commissioner for Distressed Areas, was the main subject of the all-night sitting of the House of Commons last night, and his successor in office, Sir George Gillett, had been commanded to dine with the King in the railway coach in which His Majesty travelled down to Wales last night and which he has headquarters during two days' stay there.

At Downton Co-operative Farm, which when the land is ready for intensive cultivation in the Spring of next year, will be conducted on a profit-sharing basis, the King was keenly interested in a model village of 60 houses which forms part of the settlement.

PACKED CROWD

Crowds surged close around the Royal Car when the King arrived at Pontypridd and police had to link arms to make a way to the hall in which a physical training display was given.

At Seaby Village the centre for a short course training for unemployed men was visited and the men were at a lunch when the King arrived. He caused much amusement by rapping on the side of the hut and asking in the manner of an orderly officer: "Any complaints?"

At Merthyr Tydfil immense crowds filled the streets and received the King with tremendous enthusiasm.

It was at the King's own request that he included a visit to the small and hard-hit town of Dowlais where a streamer across the main street carried the words, "This town is poor but loyal."

Last stages of to-day's tour took the Royal visitor to Aberdare and other villages and everywhere he was received with a tumult of cheering.

GERMANY AND ITALY ACTING IN CONCERT

Move seen as Attempt to Form Anti-Leftist Bloc

Berlin, Nov. 18.

Italy and Germany have recognised General Francisco Franco's revolutionary regime as the official Government of Spain; Signor Benito Mussolini and Herr Adolf Hitler have recognised General Franco as a brother dictator.

An official German communique states: "Inasmuch as General Franco's Government has taken possession of the largest part of Spanish territory, and as developments of the last few weeks have shown always more clearly that there is no longer any question but that he will exercise governmental power over the other parts of Spain, the Reich Government has decided to recognise General Franco's Government and take up diplomatic relations with the Charge d'Affaires accredited thereto."

"The new German Charge d'Affaires will present his credentials to General Franco in the near future. The German Charge d'Affaires hitherto at Alicante will be recalled."

Meanwhile, Rome has issued an almost identical communique.

A Propaganda Ministry spokesman has confirmed that Germany is acting in concert with Italy and has decided to anticipate the fall of Madrid, but he refused to say whether this action was intended to hamper Russian aid to beleaguered Leflists.

Well informed foreign circles here believe the Italo-German combination is a direct anti-Russian thrust, implying a warning that Italy and Germany will openly supply arms to General Franco if Russia attempts to interfere.

Moreover, the move is seen as a bid for the formation of an anti-Leftist bloc and a warning to Russia that a continuance of her action in supplying arms to Leflists will mean a gun-running competition in which the Soviet would be at a tremendous disadvantage.

Observers believe the Italo-German action in advance of Madrid's capitulation was dictated by the necessity of halting further outside assistance before the already stern Leflist resistance is more greatly strengthened. Germany expects several other nations, especially the South American republics, to follow her example.

A Foreign Office spokesman, however, said that Germany's attitude towards the non-intervention agreement was unchanged "for the time being."

It is learned that Great Britain still regards Germany and Italy as firmly bound by the non-intervention pact obligations.—United Press.

London, Nov. 18.

The Italian and German Governments have decided to recognise General Franco's rebel Government. An Italian communique states that the insurgent leader has taken possession of the greater part of Spain. It is continually more evident that it is impossible to speak of a responsible Government exercising power.

The French Government has therefore decided to recognise General Franco and send him a Charge d'Affaires, who is leaving immediately, the former diplomatic representatives having been recalled.

The German communique follows almost exactly similar lines and adds that a new German Charge d'Affaires is proceeding in due course to the seat of the Franco Government and that the German Charge d'Affaires at Alicante has been recalled.

The British Government, it is understood, has no intention of de-

SALENGRO ACCUSES ACCUSERS

"RESPONSIBLE FOR MY DEATH"

Lille, Nov. 18.

The suicide of M. Roger Salengro, French Minister of Interior, is attributed to depression caused by the recent death of his wife, coupled with the venomous political attacks on his war record. Mass demonstrations by the Leflists against Salengro's assailants are anticipated to-morrow.

In a most pathetic letter addressed to M. Leon Blum, Prime Minister, M. Salengro said: "My wife died as the result of calumny against me, which has also eaten my mother's heart."

"I have fought hard, but I am beaten. They did not succeed in dishonouring me, but they bear the responsibility for my death. Neither a deserter nor a traitor, my party has been my life and joy."

M. Blum's eyes were filled with tears as he read the letter with bowed head before the body of his friend.—Reuter.

U. S. LINER SAILS FOR EUROPE

STRANGE SCENE AT PIER-SIDE

New York, Nov. 18.

The American-owned luxury liner, Washington, left pier three-quarters of an hour late to-day and remained anchored in the harbour while officials of the Steamboat Inspection Service investigated charges that incompetent hands were employed to replace the strikers.

Extraordinary scenes were witnessed on the pier before the Washington's departure. Since midnight 300 strikers had been on picket duty, and passengers were hurried through the picket lines under police escort.

Nobody was allowed aboard the liner except those persons actually sailing.

Stones were thrown at taxis suspected of bringing strike-breakers to the ship, but otherwise there were no disorders.—Reuter.

Paris says

Shorter, simpler hair styles

PARIS predicts the return of the shingle. Curls are still in the forward movement, but they are being severely curbed by the hair style in favour of a smooth line that shows the shape of the head at the back. All of which is good news for the woman who likes a practical hairdressing.

The coiffure Robb has sketched for you is one of this autumn's style winners.

Points to Notice. Smooth, cap-like effect at the back. Smooth, roulean effect, up and away from the ears, in front. Flat, adjustable curls over crown.

Winning Points. Style is practical, for it does not need a twice-weekly setting at the hairdresser's. It can easily be kept in place without setting lotions or aerosols of hairpins. The smooth roll, which keeps neat all day, can be broken up and worn in flat curls, if desired, at night. The style looks equally well with a centre or a side parting. It is becoming to most faces.

Points to Remember

Before embarking on this (or any other new hair style, for that matter) have your hair shaped and tapered by the best hair-dresser you can afford to go to.

Although in the new and smoother hair-dressing which will be worn this autumn, a sleek effect is aimed at, the hair must be supple and a hard effect is to be avoided.

Drawn by
ROBB

When dressing the hair in the new roulean-shingle style place the hand firmly down on the side of the head and comb through the short front pieces (leaving the small curls out of it for the moment) over the finger. If the hair was properly set, it should emerge in a crisp, shining roll. For combing and setting the small, flat curls a fine toothed tail comb is a necessity.

MOLLY CASTLE, in Hollywood, has just had a baby daughter. Here she tells you how she adopted Japanese ideas in

Clothes for mothers-to-be

A SUITCASE is a fine thing with which to travel round the world, but it must be one of the expanding kind.

Mine wasn't expansive enough, however, to take in all I acquired in China and Japan, and I found myself leaving the Orient with a knobbly cotton-covered package that looked like a washerwoman's bundle.

The Japanese carry all their luggage in squares of strong, brightly printed cotton, and the idea has its points. So out of my suitcase came all the books and bulk, and into it went my new Chinese dresses, my Japanese kimonos.

Plan for Elegance

THOSE prospective mothers who can go around draped in furs (you lucky ones who have the winter ahead of you), or those who live in the wilds and just don't care, get on pretty well; but in a hot country, in cities, in dinner dress, for what goes under a winter coat, you have to plan a little to look elegant.

A material which is about as many-purposed as any I have yet

found is Chinese gauze. I am pretty sure you can get it in England; it is a kind of second cousin to silk but closer woven, stiffer, less crepeable.

The kind I bought had a pattern woven into it, a mandarin medallion. It's the sort of stuff that, like net, makes up particularly well into the smock, a swaggy-jacket-cut which luckily has been very popular this year.

Clouds of tulle make the visibility very bad and can be peeled at from every angle, except an angle right in front of an eye, without disclosing so much as a hint of a silhouette. But tulle will only do for evening.

So, out of my Chinese gauze I had a day dress made, with a smocky little jacket to go over it. The dress has a wrap-over skirt with press fasteners round at least half of it. You can use any that you happen to need.

The coat can be worn with a long skirt for dinner.

They don't Fidget

WHEN I finally got around to seeing a Japanese doctor I learned practically nothing from him except how to treat shock caused by trying, single-handed, to take on the Pacific Ocean, and it was my husband who had the misadventure with the waves.

For myself (and for you) I learned more from a study of the Japanese women, and from an American girl who had been studying them even longer.

The Japanese women seem to have no nerves at all. There they sit, on their heels, for hours at a time, without fidgeting or moving. Unless their hands are needed they can keep them perfectly still. I think it is something to do with knowing how to relax.

This young American I was telling you about came to Japan with her nerves all raw at the edges. She watched Japanese women and learned from them.

Learn to Relax

ASIDE from learning to relax, the first thing she did was to cut down on stimulants—alcohol, cigarettes, coffee, and strong tea. The relaxing took time, and she practised in bed at night.

The thing to do, she told me, was to try to sink through the bed, consciously seeing to it that each leg, each arm, even each foot, hand, finger, was all loosened up, letting go with its full weight. Before she had had time to go all tensed up again she was asleep.

She ate regularly instead of at all hours, but never just after she had had any mental upset. She didn't read at meals either.

In fact, if she hadn't felt so marvellously well after her treatment life would have been hardly any fun at all.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY

On the famous island of Puz-El-Yu there are three types of inhabitant who are physically indistinguishable from one another. They are known, however, as the Whites, the Blacks, and the Yellows. A White, when asked a question, invariably gives a truthful answer; a Black invariably gives an untruthful answer; a Yellow alternately lies and tells the truth, though one cannot tell whether his first answer will be a truthful one or not.

Three inhabitants—a White, a Black and a Yellow—were lounging on the beach. Their names (not necessarily respectively) were Tom, Dick and Harry. A traveller accosted the first one and the following dialogue ensued:

"What is your name?"

"Tom, Sir."

"Are you White, Black or Yellow?"

"Black, Sir."

"What is the name of your White friend?"

"Dick, Sir."

"What is the name of the Yellow?"

CUTT AND THRUST

Cutt and Thrust are two cricketing friends who occasionally play for the Dillheres. They have just informed me of a very curious fact. During each of the last three seasons they have played, between them, 12 innings (all completed) and have scored, between them, 240 runs. Thus in each season their combined average has been 20. Strange to say, however, Cutt's average each season has been exactly double Thrust's, in spite of the fact that in no two seasons has either player made the same number of runs.

In each season, moreover, both Cutt's average and Thrust's have been whole numbers.

What are the respective aggregates of Cutt and Thrust for the three seasons' play?

Russian Recipes

JUST a short line to give you those other recipes from Russia I promised you. First, the authentic way to make good Bortsch.

Peel a dozen tomatoes, cut up a quantity of cabbage, celery and other green vegetables, and place in a large stewpan with salt, pepper, soup meat and bones. Cover with water and boil slowly for four or five hours, removing the scum as it rises and adding water as required.

Cut-up some fat bacon into small pieces and pound in a mortar with flour. Cool a little of the soup and work it in by degrees, and when sufficiently liquid add to the rest in the stewpan. Add a little vinegar to taste and let it all boil gently for half an hour.

Then add some whole potatoes, peeled and washed, and boil gently for another half-hour. Remove the bones and serve in a tureen. Serve at the same time a dish of cream, preferably sour.

Try these stuffed Tomatoes

THIS is an excellent Russian way of dealing with tomatoes. Choose well-shaped ones, cut the tops off, and scoop out the insides. Make a stuffing of minced raw meat, boiled rice, chopped onion and herbs, well seasoned with salt and pepper. Fill the tomatoes and replace the tops.

Put the scooped-out tomatoes into a fireproof dish with a sprinkling of chopped onion and parsley. Arrange the tomatoes on top of this and bake in a moderate oven till cooked through. Then pour carefully between (not over) the tomatoes a quantity of thick cream, about half a pint for six tomatoes.

Replace in the oven till the cream is thoroughly heated, and serve in the same dish as you cooked them in.

New sort of Sandwich

GREEN CAVIARE makes a tasty sandwich filling. Bake some aubergines till they are tender and soft. Scoop out the insides and chop small with little onions, olives, chilli, salt and pepper. Season with olive oil, vinegar, and a very little Worcester sauce.

Lastly, Kisel is an economical and easy to make fruit dish. Take any remains of stewed fruit and juice. Add water, boil and thicken with potato flour and serve.

Yours,

Rose Marie

HUSBAND & WIFE WERE BOTH BIGAMISTS

Bitter Outbursts In Court

London Nov. 8.
HUSBAND and wife followed each other into the dock at Dorset Assizes yesterday, and both were found guilty of bigamy.

So bitter were their outbursts against each other that, when the time came to pass judgment, Mr. Justice Charles said:—
"I don't know if I should put the husband in the dock with the wife. The wonder will have to intervene his small frame between them."
The woman interposed: "Oh, I won't do anything to him."
So, with the wonder between them, the couple stood in the dock.

"DON'T BELIEVE EITHER"

Addressing the woman first, Mr. Justice Charles said that he was disinclined to send her to jail, but if he did not he could not send the man, because they were as bad as one another.

"You both don't care a penny about decency or law," he continued. "You both wanted to go off with somebody else, and off you went. You both have lied. I don't believe either of you."

The couple were Frederick Roberts Mahaba Cooke, aged 36, of Parkstone, who was charged with bigamyously marrying Florence Pounds at Poole, and Mrs. Hannah May Cooke, also 36, charged with bigamyously marrying Percy John Weston at Lymington.

OTHER WOMAN'S STORY

Mrs. Cooke gave evidence that her husband went away with another woman in 1931.
She saw him in London the next

Story told to the Congregational Union Assembly at Birmingham by a London Deacon, Mr. J. B. Gottis.

In a certain town the Free Churches and the Church of England representatives formed a social council and dealt successfully with various social evils. There seemed to be something wrong and they got no farther. Then it was discovered that three members of this council were themselves owners of slum property. One was a churchwarden, another was a deacon, and the third was the brother of a missionary.

year, sent him £10 later, and received a letter from him stating that a divorce had gone through, and that if she waited six months she would be free to marry him.

Florence Pounds said that Cooke told her he had been divorced and was free to marry.

Challenge To Queen Mary

By A Special Correspondent.

Southampton, Nov. 10.
A North American rival to the Queen Mary and the Normandie was hinted at by Mr. P. A. S. Franklin, chairman of the International Mercantile Marine, who arrived here to-day in the Queen Mary.

"The idea is in the background of our schemes," he admitted to me, "but I would not like to say anything definite yet."
"We still have our problem with the Leviathan, which has been laid up so long."

"It will cost so much to put her in service again, and she costs such a lot to operate that I doubt whether she will go into service again, even though the Coronation next year will mean a great boom in American tourist traffic to England."

"Work will start on the sister ship of our Manhattan and Washington at the end of the year. She will be an improvement on them, and should be commissioned by the end of 1938."

Harry G. Prentiss went down to the Cunard pier at New York to see some friends off in the Queen Mary. They threw a party in their tourist class cabin, and when the party ended they were well out to sea.

"Poor Harry was very frightened and hid himself away. But only for 24 hours."

He thought the best thing to do was to give himself up. He was taken to the bridge, where Captain Sir Edgar Britten decided that he was not a real stowaway.

He gave him a job of work to do in the ship, and he was landed at Southampton to-day, and not locked up on condition that he returns to America by the very next boat.

Patriots Will Beat Anarchists Who Murder Liberty

WHEN the Empire of the Tsars fell, Russia had, for a few months, her only democratic regime. It was crushed by the Bolsheviks.

Head of the defeated democratic Government was Kerensky.

He knows too well the methods of the Reds which drove him into exile 19 years ago.

And here, in an interview with a London newspaper he gives his view—founded on his unique experience—of what has happened, is happening, will happen in Spain.

By ALEXANDER KERENSKY

(The Russian Premier whom the Reds expelled)

I AM certain that the patriots will emerge victorious from the Spanish civil war.

This will not mean the defeat of the "Frente Popular"; it will mean that the Spanish democracy, caught between the crossfire of two extremist movements, will perish utterly.

I know Senor Azana (the Spanish President), and he stands high in my esteem. It is, however, to be deeply regretted that he was not able to keep the extreme left-wing under control.

It is the fashion to accuse the Socialists and Democratic regimes of preparing the path for Fascism. This is not true.

It is always the Communists who, attacking and weakening the Democratic Party, secure a victory for those of the extreme right. The origin of all Fascist dictatorships has invariably been the same. After the first Communist revolution in Hungary and in Munich, brought about temporary Bolshevik control, I felt sure that Fascism would engulf all those countries where Moscow's intervention in governmental affairs was tolerated.

RED BID

Nazidom owes its ascent to power to two direct causes: one, the moral and economic bankruptcy of Germany, and the other, the blind belief in the Great War, and second, and far more important, to the Communist bid for control.

In Spain, Largo Caballero, the present Premier, started hatching Communist conspiracies as far back as February. A group led by Indalecio Prieto openly opposed him. The more moderate leader wanted to bring him to reason.

Useless.

THE CAUSE

To-day we are witnessing, helplessly, the work of this malign influence. It is not a revolution, but a war provoked by the blindness of Bolshevism. And in a war there is no doubt that victory will always go to the military.

In Spain the Patriot troops possess an incalculable advantage over the Government forces. They are soldiers and their true aim is war.

The better the military are, the better they will withstand a long campaign; they have neither discipline nor the equipment of their adversaries.

ANARCHISTS

The liberty of Spain will pass away in flames.

I accuse Largo Caballero rather than Franco of having started the civil war.

One might get to understand the Socialists and even the Communists, but what about the Anarchists? They are impossible people. With their warlike lack of discipline they respect neither the freedom of the individual nor the institutions for the maintenance of freedom.

While destroying the framework of society, they also destroy him whom they would rescue from State slavery—the individual himself.

In France, too, the danger is certainly very great.

But I cannot formulate an opinion upon the future of France. I can only hope that in following a strong democratic tradition France will save herself from the disasters which extremists of the right or left would cause.

I hope that the Socialists, the Radicals and the Moderates of the Labour Party will succeed in forming a central block which will check the activities of both Communist and Fascist.

Ahead, the Soviet agents profess the most perfect liberalism and instigate the formation of Popular Fronts, while in their own country flourishes the most tyrannical of dictatorships, as was demonstrated by the recent Zinoviev trial.

Democracy is not yet dead—look at the Scandinavian States and, above all, at England. There they have managed to avoid the Communist peril and retained their time-honoured democratic institutions. Those nations have not had to adopt a red or black or a brown dictatorship.

And you cannot tell me that Britain's insular position makes her different from the rest of Europe. On the contrary, I believe that today it is she that represents the genuine European spirit.

And do not forget this—Bolshevism always signifies disaster.

Alberta Dividends £1 To £2

Calgary, Alberta, Nov. 10.

The Government of Alberta announces the immediate opening of credit houses throughout the province where basic dividends will be paid—starting in three weeks' time—to 300,000 registered citizens.

Government authorities state that the dividends are to be £1 to £2, not the £5 a month promised during the elections.

Mr. William Aberhart, the Premier, says he will ask the Canadian Government for a loan of more than £200,000 to meet the needs of the province. Mr. Charles Dunning, the Dominion Finance Minister, declares that no loan will be given to Alberta or any other province by the Federal Government, and that this is clearly understood by all State Premiers.

Ex-Kaiser As Ideal Squire

THE ex-Kaiser would have made the ideal English borough councillor.

E. F. Benson gives this opinion on Germany's William II, in "The Kaiser and English Relations," published by Longmans. He says:

"Destiny had been cruel in ordaining that a man of his temperament should be emperor of a great nation."

"Throughout his reign he had never shown any grasp of the serious responsibilities of kingship."

"His happiest years were his exile."

"If only Providence had consecrated him to be a squire of simple means and estate just outside some county town in England, what a pleasant and useful existence might have been his."

"His defects, ruinous in a monarch, would have been merely humorous and even endearing."

REFORMER

"As a member of the borough council he would have proposed a hundred reforms."

Mr. Benson imagines the ex-Kaiser in the card-room of the county club, laying down the law to his partner at bridge and soon afterwards revoking amid general satisfaction.

"He would have been president of the local cricket and golf clubs, would have contributed large pictures to the annual art exhibition, and got up penny readings in his village, reciting the more famous passages in Shakespeare's plays."

ACE GIRLS SWIMMER FORFEITING FAME FOR MAN SHE LOVES

RIE MASTENBROEK, the world's speediest woman swimmer, now only 17, will forsake the water for a husband and a home.

The fair-haired Dutch girl has been making a short swimming tour in England. When she returned to London, she spoke of her romance.

"He is Dutch, too," she said, "and we are, what you say, very, very fond."

She won the 100 metres and 400 metres events at the Olympic Games in August. Twice she broke Olympic records.

Olympic judges said that in two or three years she would probably become the greatest woman swimmer the world has ever known.

But by then Rie counts on being a model Dutch housewife, with a home in Rotterdam, and a blond Dutch husband.

"I cannot think I have a swimming future," she said "because when I am married I shall swim in public no more."

"Old fashioned? If you say so."

Yet dancing I like, and I do not train a lot." (In eight days Miss Mastenbrook swam in eleven races and was only once defeated.)

"Swimming is as easy to me as walking is to you. I was three when first I learned to slip through the water."

WOMAN'S DUTY

"Perhaps it is said that I may never take part again in the Olympic battles. But a woman's duty is to her husband and her home."

"When I am married to HIM I will not want honours—just a home and happiness."

Miss Mastenbrook then went off to Lime Grove Baths, Hammersmith, and beat another British record by covering 440 yards in 5 mins. 55secs.

CINEMA NOTES

The contrast of young romance and crafty gangsterdom is vividly presented in the film, "Sworn Enemy", showing to-day at the King's Theatre. The story concerns two young brothers born and raised in the seething heart of a great city, where the influence of the grim racketeers is never far away. One of them is ruthlessly killed because he knows too much and the other swears to avenge him. Joseph Calleia, the cinema's victim of the screen, plays a Lon Chaney role as a crippled gangster, chief of the Young porters, the surviving brother who becomes the manager of a prizefighter, played by Nat Pendleton, the Saviour of "The Great Ziegfeld". Florence Rice, daughter of the famous writer, Grantland Rice, has the feminine lead and she definitely won the affection of the audience last night. Others in the cast of this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture are Lewis Stone, the veteran character actor, Harold Intermyer, Harvey Stephens and Samuel Hinds. It is a picture who directed "Sworn Enemy", showing at the King's Theatre, is a native of Jersey City and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. He left college to start at once as "The Death Kiss" with Ralph Forbes and Adrienne Ames in 1932. He was successful from the start. Among the notable pictures he directed were "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi", "The Crosby Case", "The Bombay Mail", "The Paris Interlude", "The Casino Murder Case", "The Garden Murder Case" and now "Sworn Enemy".

"Yellowstone"

Many and strange are the mysteries which have made their way to the screen. Among the strangest is Universal's "Yellowstone", which opens at the Queen's Theatre to-day. This offering, set in the picturesque grandeur of Yellowstone National Park, concerns the murder of a man tossed up by the great geyser in that beauty spot of nature. A buried treasure, worth $50,000 is sought by many of the figures in the story. This leads to the man's destruction. Among the suspects in the story are Dick Sherwood, forest ranger, whose

"Neil Gwyn"

Anna Neagle, the only girl developed in British studios who has achieved world stardom without leaving Eire, bursts into her full glory as "Neil Gwyn" (now at the Star Theatre) with as ravishing a performance as the screen has seen in many a month. Miss Neagle plays Neil as history depicts her—bawdy, unrestrained and during a woman of unabashed personality, ready wit, and bodily charm—the Mae West of the Restoration period. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, with a make up which bears a most striking resemblance to portraits of the Stuart King, gives the performance as Charles II. Charles emerges from the film not only as the Merry Monarch but as a great statesman. A brilliant supporting cast, mainly famous stage personalities, includes Jeanne de Casalis, Esme Percy, Helena Pickard, Miles Malsion, Muriel George, Lawrence Anderson, O. B. Clarence, Tonic Bruce and Moore Marriott.

"The Last Outlaw"

rhythmical pattern, and you must study every speech until you find out what this pattern is. The following sentence gives a simple example of the use of infection. "He came up the stairs, walked along the passage, opened the door, and with a violent push smashed his way into the room." The three introductory phrases must be spoken with an upward, and the climax with a downward inflection, the result being that the rising note gives a feeling of suspense, and the downward one rounds off the climax. This principle of contrast must be applied to all speeches. Verse needs a greater amount of variety than prose, and the best way of studying infection is to read passages from the plays of Shakespeare, as part of the daily practice, until correct infection becomes natural. Closely linked with infection is tone. The tone in which you speak a sentence can entirely alter the meaning. Try saying the words "come in" (as if someone were knocking at the door) in as many different tones as you can think of. Without altering infection or stress you will be able to suggest anger, anxiety, hope, fear, impatience, and many other emotions or reactions, and by looking out for places in your part in which changes of tones can be introduced you will be able to improve the dramatic effect of your words greatly.

as lovers caught in a battle between a mob of modern killers and a pair of old time desperado who, seemingly reduced to a mild peace-loving old gentleman by twenty-five years in prison, suddenly flares up with all his old courage to take the law into his own hands and crush a pack of gangsters. Henry B. Walthall, featured with Tom Tyler, appears as a gun wizard pal of Carey. Together with a tough young cowhand, portrayed by Gibson, these two match six-shooters against sub-machine guns in a dramatic counter-part of an old time manhunt in the Oklahoma hills. Ray Mayer, Russell Hopton, Harry Jans, Frank Jenks, Frank Thomas, Fred Scott and Maxine Jennings are importantly cast. Christy Cabanne directed. Robert Sisk produced. Showing at the Alhambra Theatre to-day.

"While Parents Sleep"

The march of time has wrought many changes to the old village fairground where the coon-skinny was the chief attraction. To-day the fun-o-the-fair, although on grandiose scale, is always a hundred per cent. fun! The Kussall, that famous pleasure ground at Southend, was used for the filming of crowd scenes in the new Gaskin-British and Dominions production "While Parents Sleep," which comes to the Majestic Theatre to-day. It is here, amid the lights and laughter, that Jerry, played by MacKenzie Ward, meets Jean Gillie as "Bubbles" Thompson, the vivacious Brixton shopgirl. She is having trouble with a tough stallholder. Jerry takes up the cudgels on her behalf, and emerges from the subsequent fight very much the worse for wear. And no wonder, for his opponent is a six-foot-eight giant, Carver Doone, the well-known wrestler. This is just the beginning of Jerry's adventures in pursuit of his beloved "Bubbles," and from his many set-backs arises much of the hilarious comedy which is a strong feature of "While Parents Sleep." Foremost among the rest of the cast are End Stamp Taylor, Ellis Jeffreys, Athole Stewart, Romilly Lunge and Davy Burnaby.

The forthrightly dance of the Royal Engineers Old Comrades Association will be held in the Roof Garden of the Peninsula Hotel on Saturday, November 28, commencing at 8.30 p.m., when the dance band of H.M.S. Hermes will play. Table bookings may be made by applying to the Hon. Secretary, Chief Engineers' Office, Command Headquarters, Hongkong, not later than noon on Friday, November 27.

CHINESE ART DISPLAY

EXHIBITION OPEN IN LONDON

London, Nov. 18. An exhibition of fifty-one paintings by T'ung H. Chiu, the husband of Mr. T. V. Soong's sister-in-law, was opened to-day by Mr. Quo T'ai-chi, the Chinese Ambassador, at a gathering of the Fine Arts Society.

Chiu generally adopts the Western style of painting, but with a distinct Chinese feeling. The pictures are chiefly landscapes and they cover a wide variety of scenes, from Peking to Scotland. The artist will spend the winter painting in Morocco.—Reuter.

Stomach Sufferer's Own Warning Against 'Rubbishing Imitations'

The really marvellous effects of Maclean Brand Stomach Powder in all cases of stomach trouble have led to the introduction of cheap substitutes. Many sufferers who have been cured feel it their duty to warn other sufferers to guard against accepting anything but the genuine Maclean Brand Stomach Powder that put them right. Mr. F.S.L. who writes "after three years of frightful torture I was restored to perfect health by Maclean Brand," continues: "To everyone I tell this story I have to explain how all over the country there are rubbishy imitations. It is only your persistent advertising that warns people of the damage that misunderstanding may mean."

When there is so reliable and successful a remedy as Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, the one with the signature, it is foolish to accept any cheap imitation. Your most precious possession is your health. Dare you endanger it by taking something which looks like genuine Maclean Brand, but is nothing like it in exact balance and purity of ingredients?

Your sure safeguard is the signature "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" on every carton of the genuine Maclean Brand. Insist on seeing the signature if you want to be certain of relief for your suffering. Maclean Brand Stomach Powder is never sold loose. Powder or tablets in bottles in cartons. If any difficulty in obtaining write to: Banker & Co., Ltd., P.O. Box 536, Hongkong.

Picture of a man who is KIND to his face

Yes, this man uses Williams Shaving Cream—that's why he smiles as he shaves. Williams is made from the finest ingredients, made as only a century of experience can dictate how. That's why Williams lather is so mild, so tender, yet so efficient. It is kinder to the face as well as the head. It soaks thoroughly, smooths the path of the razor, ensures a clean, close shave without smart or pull. Finally, it leaves your face fit, supple, refreshed. Williams is economical too. A little of this choice cream makes a lot of lather... Men who know Williams will have no other.

THE DYSENTERY INVESTIGATIONS

Now that there is a welcome diminution in the number of cases of dysentery, the public generally will harbour the hope that the epidemic, which has taken such a heavy toll of infant life, is definitely on the decline.

Complete reassurance, however, is not yet possible, and in the meantime residents will do well to refrain from the consumption of uncooked foodstuffs, of unpasteurised milk, or of unboiled water. The continuance of precautions is essential until the cause of the outbreak has been definitely established. Exhaustive investigations are known to have been instituted by the health authorities, but the problem is one which, for a variety of reasons, cannot be solved quickly. Certain preliminary conclusions have already been reached, and the deductions therefrom are being carefully analysed. One of the biggest handicaps which investigators face in enquiries of this kind is that by the time the tests from suspected sources are complete, the milk, water or food which may have become contaminated has already passed into circulation. It is quite possible, of course, that the disease may have been transmitted by a carrier who is himself unaffected.
 The authorities have gathered detailed data in regard to every case so far reported, and in the near future a preliminary official statement on the result of the investigations may be expected. So far as making dysentery a notificable disease is concerned, it is understood that there are some difficulties which would have to be overcome, but there seems no reason why compulsory pasteurisation of all the Colony's milk supplies should not be enforced.
 These two points will, with others, no doubt receive the early attention of the Government.
 Steps will also, we have reason to believe, be taken to pursue further enquiries on the possibility of infection by carriers, as well as on other aspects of what is a most complex problem. The public may therefore rest assured that the whole matter is being explored, with a view both to checking any further spread of the disease and to preventing the occurrence of a fresh outbreak. It is essential, however, that, for the time being at any rate, due safeguards should be taken by the community along the lines already indicated.

THESE MEN REFUSED TO BE COWARDS

By Capt. FRANCIS McCULLAGH

UP the rebels! Hats off to the Donal! I am heart and soul with the rebels in the Spanish Civil War. Here is the reason.

Seventeen years ago I witnessed the annihilation of a whole class of decent, cultured, Christian people in Russia. And mark you, they were not the old Tsarist gentry who had already been disposed of by Kerensky. They were progressive, democratic, liberal-minded, middle-class people. A good many of them were as "advanced" and as pacific as
 Mr. George Lansbury.

First they were bewitched by the eloquence of a President who meant well and took himself very seriously, but was really weak, vain, a dreamer, unsound of judgment, a catastrophe to his country in that time of crisis.
 He had that enter a man, a man of few words but strong character;
 a man who sincerely believed in an ideal of Government which, if put into practice, would ruin the world; a ruthless and determined man; the most dangerous and formidable revolutionary that ever lived. That man was Lenin.

Allowed Themselves

To be Butchered

Lenin, bribed the simple-minded people with cheques for unlimited amounts on the Bank of Illusions, with promises of a world in which there would be no war, no want, no hunger, no oppression, no armies, no masters. Slowly the army was de-moralised, the Generals and officers retired, disarmed, isolated. Then the slaughter began, and it did not stop owners, priests, women, children, members of the intelligentsia, Liberals, Socialists even.

The Red Terror was unleashed, but worse than that Terror in the eyes of these foreign observers who, hated Bolshevism and wanted moderation to prevail was the three-day massacre with which the White Russians allowed themselves to be butchered.
 A very large proportion of them were military men in the prime of vigorous manhood, magnificent specimens physically, yet, as if hypnotised, they let all sorts of words be heaped upon them without any effort at resistance. Even in the last days and Tartar executioners expressed contempt for them. One sympathetic American diplomatist could not refrain from recording in print his utter and unmitigated disgust.

The Spaniards

Hit Back

Confronted by the same Red Terror, the same class of Spaniards exhibited no symptoms of hypnosis or paralysis. They did not let their hands be put to the hands of the cuffs or their throats to the knife.
 They made no appeal to foreign nations. It was their enemies who yelled to France for bombers and poison gas. They depended on God in Heaven and, so far as this earth was concerned, on themselves alone.
 They acted nobly for money.
 They drew up their plans, and very good plans they were. They kept their own counsel. And when they saw that the Reds were on the point of establishing a Red Soviet, they struck hard, struck quickly, and struck to the death. Even if they fail they will go down fighting.

More power to them! Hats off to the Donal!

For a moment indeed they had been hypnotised by the magic of that word Republic, and misled by the eloquent assurances of novelists and professors — men who were used by the Reds to deceive the people and who are now cast aside (such of them as survive) like empty bladders.

Had They Waited

Twelve Months

Had the White Spaniards waited six months more, their army would have been demoralised, their officers retired, disarmed, isolated, themselves helpless.

Had they waited twelve months, those officers and every Christian leader in Spain and every enemy of Bolshevism from Bilbao to Algeiras would have been slaughtered as the White Russians were slaughtered.

But a few years' time would have happened. The demoralisation of the youth of Spain would have gone too far for cure. How far it has actually gone, where the most frightful butcheries were perpetrated by boys and girls of from 14 to 17. This wholesale demoralisation of children is a special feature of the Red atrocities throughout Spain.

Some time back Comrade Largo
 Caballero established in Spain a League of Communist Youth, exactly on the style of the Russian Komsomol, and it is this League which has demoralised the young. For the last six months the Communists have been working with feverish energy, as they always do (the energy of a pestiferous microbe) on the "education" of the young; and in this in other matters they have had abundant help from Moscow.

Capt. McCullagh

CAPT. Francis McCullagh, Irish journalist, is one of the most famous living war correspondents.

Always on the spot when upheavals break out, he was special correspondent for the New York Herald during the Russian Japanese War, the Russian Revolution, the Portuguese Revolution in 1910, when King Manuel abdicated, at Madrid; at Tripoli; in the Balkan War (in which he was captured).

After serving in the World War, he went to Russia. Was captured by the Bolsheviks while retreating with Kolchak's army.
 After release, went to Moscow again in 1922, but was expelled for his reports of the trial of Mr. Czeplak.

Spain Next

Lenin's Prophecy

Trained Bolshevik agitators have been pouring into Spain since February last, and one of them stated last spring that, on a certain date in the month of July, Hell would be let loose in Spain. He even gave the exact date. General Franco was right in declaring war on Hell, before it declared war on him.

Karl Radek, one of the leading Bolsheviks, told me once at dinner in the British Embassy in Moscow that Spain would be the first country in Europe to go Red. I laughed at his prophecy, or rather, at Lenin's prophets, for Radek was only repeating a famous sentence uttered by Lenin, for I believed that ultra-Catholic Spain was as safe from Bolshevism as ultra-Catholic Ireland.

But he was right. It had seen the secret reports that came from Spain to the Kremlin, and he had seen the emissaries of revolution who had actually been in Spain.

Later on I became aware of the intense and silent activity of the Russian Bolsheviks in the Iberian Peninsula, and now that I look back on that infernal activity in the light of present happenings, I shudder, for it seems to me like the silent, indefatigable activity of death-bringers waiting for the signal to strike.

I also saw clearly how the extraordinary influence that these Russian professors of revolution had over their Spanish pupils. Their extreme and fiendish cruelty to the Spaniards burning of churches and monasteries, the Russian Bolsheviks also had their habit of exhuming the bodies of dead men from convent cemeteries, a habit which is incomprehensible to Western Christians, for the Catholic Church does not claim, as the Orthodox Russians do, that the bodies of all saints are incorruptible.

To prevent the ruin of all the children, and to prevent the establishment in Spain of a Soviet Republic, the Spanish Christians struck. Were they wrong in striking? Should they have waited for, say, Mr. George Lansbury, to have given the word?
 Then they would have waited for ever.

AMATEUR ACTING

Second Article

AFTER breathing the most important point is enunciation, which brings all the vocal organs into play. If you open your mouth wide and say "ah" without moving the tongue or lips, you get an indeterminate sound which in no way can be made to suggest a word. Only when that sound has been modified by bringing the teeth, tongue, and lips into action can it become a word.

This process is so natural and so rapid that it is impossible, without going into considerable detail, to describe exactly what happens to sounds when they are being converted into speech. The best way to study the mechanics of elocution is to get hold of a good book on elocution in which a detailed description of the construction of the mouth and vocal organs will be found. It is not advisable to take too much notice of elocutionary books on the subject of dramatic interpretation, for their technique is more applicable to the concert platform than the stage.

Be careful of over-enunciation, which may be caused by a too faithful following of the old tag "take care of the consonants and the vowels will take care of themselves." If the words of a sentence are chopped up and the syllables over-emphasised, the speech becomes stilted and forced. Usage allows certain sounds to be slurred in order to give in-naturalness—for instance, the word
 "certain" is correctly pronounced
 "cert'n" and not "cert'nyn." A sense of proportion is required in enunciation in order to achieve the medium course between carelessness and pedantry.

THE RESONANT VOICE

A very important factor in clear stage speech, which may not be so noticeable in ordinary conversation, is the necessity of keeping the voice

Justification

For Rising

The circumstances in which they struck have not been made clear by the military leaders, in the first place because none of them has shown the journalistic aptitude of the Reds; and in the second place because all the accounts we have had so far of the origins of the war, have come from Madrid, and bear traces of Madrilenian mendacity. Even honest and impartial correspondents have been unconsciously influenced by the atmosphere of Madrid.

Everything hinged on the fact that the Spanish Reds were honestly accepted the Republic. They wanted to make it a stepping-stone to a Soviet dictatorship; and now they have got their dictatorship, based on the beggary of the Red militia, which is Bolshevik in a man. President Azana may sign decrees and perform other official duties, but power rests with the Reds.

Even in the middle of July the Reds controlled the Cabinet of Senor Casares Quiroga, and this fact led to the disturbances that broke out all over the country about that time. By July 16, those disturbances had become so serious that Senor Casares Quiroga resigned, whereupon the President summoned the Speaker of the Cortes, Senor Martinez Barrio, to form a Cabinet of moderate Republicans.

Had this Cabinet remained, the Army would have been satisfied, because it included one man whom they could trust, Senor Sanchez Roman, who had objected to the association of the Casares Quiroga Cabinet with the Communists and had refused to sign the Fronte Popular pact before the last elections.

It Was a

Red Revolution

But the Marxists smashed this Cabinet immediately, whereupon Senor Azana recalled the Casares Quiroga Cabinet, thus acting uncon-stitutionally, for the Communists had no right to override his prerogative.

The composition of the new Cabinet pleased the Bolsheviks so much that they determined to support it by armed force, and at midnight on Saturday, July 18, armed patrols of Bolsheviks took charge of the streets of the whole city. They searched every passer-by, and the police almost entirely disappeared.

This was nothing less than a Red Revolution, and the members of the Union Militar Espanola were quite justified in firing from the roof-top at those armed intruders who had, without any authority, made themselves masters of the city.

It was the Reds, therefore, who began the Revolution, and not the Whites.

But, thanks to the expert advice they received from their Moscow friends, the specialists in revolution, the Spanish Reds, who were quite cunning than even their master, Lenin, Vladimir Ilych went full tilt against the Government; his Spanish disciples use the Government as a shield, consequently they are loyalists, and their opponents are Rebels.

Words in Season to the Beginner

By GERARD FAY

out of the throat. The shape of the mouth is such that it acts as an "expansion chamber" for the sounds produced by the vocal organs, giving them the strength and resonance which will carry them over the distance from the stage to the furthest seat in the auditorium.

Resonance in speech must be developed if the voice is to be effective, and here again the elocution book will be useful in giving exercises. It is a curious belief amongst many amateurs that the time spent in rehearsals and the actual public performance of the play is sufficient to give practice in the technique of acting. This is quite absurd.

All good actors practise movement and action apart entirely from rehearsal, although the legitimate stage has, in the last few decades, fallen far behind the music-hall and variety theatre in this respect.

When you think of the hours of practice devoted to the perfection of vaudeville acts, or the learning of a piece of music, the few hours given to study by actors become significant.
 Since amateurs generally make only spasmodic appearances, practice is even more essential to them than to professionals. Half an hour a day of practice in speech and movement should be the minimum for the conscientious amateur.

GOOD PRONUNCIATION

Pronunciation has to do with the values to be given to different sounds in order to produce a pleasant, musical, and cultured accent.

Let me pause here to remark that the idea of the Popular Front, which admittedly came from Moscow, proves that there lives to-day in the Kremlin a revolutionary chief who is far abler, subtler and more dangerous than his predecessors, the real revolutionary chief who lies embalmed in the Red Square.

It is an idea of genius, for it enables a small united group of Bolsheviks to dominate a large, dis-united body of Socialists, Radicals, Liberals, Nationalists, Separatists, and Trade Unionists, and finally to treat them with utter contempt.

Illegally

To return to the illegal seizure of the Capital by armed Reds. The Union Militar Espanola was not so flabby as the army of Kerensky. It had decided beforehand on what to do to cause the Reds seized power. It had concocted a very good plot.

Now, of Conservative plots in the Iberian Peninsula I happen to know something, for about a quarter of a century ago I was acquainted with some of the Portuguese monarchists who were trying to restore King Manuel to his throne. I went a number of times to Spain and Portugal in order to chronicle their counterrevolution and to share in their expected triumph.

I spent weeks in Tury on the Portuguese frontier, waiting for their column to march. I spent weeks in Vigo waiting for their arms to land.
 I spent a long, dreary time in Madrid, waiting for the Reds to march. I was in Monterey, in Lisbon, in Oporto, in Belgium, where they had bought arms and a ship, but failed to get the arms into the ship owing to the talkativeness of a bluffer, whose indiscretions were too much even for the friendly Belgian authorities; in Paris, that home of all plotters, where loose-tongued Portuguese Royalists also managed to mess things up.

But this Spanish plot was altogether different. To obtain almost simultaneous action at so many different points was indeed a feat.
 Once again I take off my hat to the Hidalgo.

The reader must not think that this was exclusively an army matter.
 Among the rebels there are more civilians than soldiers. Practically all Spain, save Catalonia, is on the side of revolt.

Nobody can foretell the issue, because nobody knows how far the Communist rot has gone in Spain. If only Catalonia and the Asturias and a few of the large cities are affected, all will be well. Spain will save Europe from Bolshevism as she saved Europe from Islam. The Don will be the mad bull destined to slash off the mad bull of Moscow.

Before Force

Louis Bertrand, a French Academician and a great authority on Spanish history, says very truly in one of his books that in history there is no such thing as an irresistible movement, that a strong, determined man can block the road to revolution, that one is never conquered till he believes that he is conquered.

Speaking of Philip II, he adds that "no example is more comforting than his, or more efficacious against the depressing suggestions of pessimism and of historic determinism, and against that political mysticism which "reels down like a coward before the accomplished fact or the simple appearance of force."

Which brings me back to the possibility from which I started, that the Spaniards did not follow the mysticism of the Slav, did not kneel like cowards before the accomplished fact or the simple appearance of force, but struck back at once.

The Spanish Christians will save not only themselves. They will save Europe again. They will save Christendom. Hats off to the Donal! More power to them!

The only sure guide to good pronunciation is that it should be free from all localisms and affectations.
 Neither the "West End" nor the "Oxford" accent is good English, any more than Cockney or Lancashire accents are. It has been said that the best King's English is spoken by the King himself, and most people who have heard the King speaking over the radio will be inclined to agree.

The most desirable accent for stage purposes is what is rather vaguely known as "Standard English," and good exponents of this type of speech, who will serve as models to amateurs,
 are such actors as Charles Laughton, Flora Robson, Cedric Hardwicke, and Robert Donat, to mention only a few.

Apart from super-sophistication and other annoying poses, the English spoken by some of the B.C. announcers may be accepted as a good standard. The most important thing to remember in acquiring a good stage accent is that the pronunciation must be worked until it becomes involuntary, for mere imitation of good models cannot produce a pleasant form of diction.

The combination of soft lights, comfortable seats, and a high temperature produces in an audience a distressing tendency to lapse into unconsciousness, and keeping the spectators awake is one of the first duties of an actor. If the voice comes in a steady drone, the narcotic effect will be heightened instead of lessened, and it is therefore necessary for the player to achieve a constant variety in his speech.

AVOIDING MONOTONY

Inflection is the principal means of avoiding monotony. You must not allow your voice to stay for too long on the same note.

A well-inflected speech is rather like a song. There is a definite

Orsborne Says He Fled Africa After Fight With Blacks

AFTER the Girl Pat left Corcubion, Spain, on her runaway voyage from Grimsby, Captain Orsborne and his crew sailed straight into new adventures.

Orsborne, telling the story at the Old Bailey last month, when he resumed his evidence, recalled how they put in at Dakar, on the West Coast of Africa, had a fight with natives, left in a hurry and made the voyage across the Atlantic, reaching Devil's Island in 16 days.

From Devil's Island they went to Georgetown, British Guiana, reaching there on June 19. They were arrested, but released, and Orsborne attended the Governor's reception on the King's birthday.

Later, said Orsborne, he sold his story for £5,000. He and the man who wrote part of it—in the form of a statement—had seven or eight bottles of beer and some rum together, so he, Orsborne, was not too clear about it.

It was Orsborne's second day in the box.

FEARED BOARDING

He began by telling how, after leaving Tenerife, they passed some ships lying in the Italian flag. Italian raiders were boarding all ships on the Moroccan coast, and he was afraid they would board the Girl Pat.

The Italians did not, and the boat called at Port Etienne, where it ran on to some sand banks. They were there three or four days before they could get it off.

They then made for Dakar, where they were for about three days, and the stores had then finished. They asked for Lloyd's agent, but did not see Mr. McLean until an hour and a half before they sailed.

Their boat had then no food on her, and they got supplies from Devil's Island for a month.

They were only 400 miles from Georgetown, and it took them a few days to reach there.

BECAME KIA ORA

"We painted a name on the bridge—Kia Ora—that was about as good as a ship's name. We did not want to be stopped by foreign ships again. There was already a French cruiser circling after us," said Orsborne.

When they were satisfied it was British territory they scraped the name Kia Ora off.

As they approached Georgetown an airplane flew over and dropped a message asking if they were the Girl Pat. He signalled back that they were.

Next morning the Pomeroon (a river passenger boat), with 30 or 40 armed black policemen, sailed on board her, tried to go alongside.

"She smashed the ship's side in as they tried to board," said Orsborne. "As we got close to harbour, our oil ran out and we asked for a tow and they towed us in. I went ashore and later that day made a statement to the police. We were arrested on landing and released the next day at one o'clock."

Mr. Christmas Humphreys (one of counsel for defence): For what were you arrested?—I don't know.

RECEIVED BY GOVERNOR

On June 23, which was the King's birthday, did you attend a reception at the invitation of the Governor, and thereafter were you told something about your offer in connection with the Girl Pat?—Yes.

What had your offer been?—I offered to carry on and take her back to England.

Was that offer accepted or refused?—I got no answer.

Orsborne said that he made arrangements to fly to America and catch the Berengaria to England from New York. Ginger Stephens and Harris (two of the crew) came back.

The charge against you is of stealing the Girl Pat. At any time had you any intention of depriving the owners permanently of that vessel?—None at all.

Mr. Paley Scott (prosecuting) began his cross-examination by asking Orsborne if he had proposed to fly to America and come home by liner.

Orsborne: Yes. The passage was already booked.

Who was paying for the airplane?—I had sold the story of the Girl Pat for £5,000.

To whom?—To the Anglo-Continental.

Is that a company publishing the People newspaper?—No. They have newspapers all over the world as far as I know.

On what day did you sell these

Lord Nuffield Tells Why £1,350,000 Gift

YOUNG 'BILL' MORRIS WAS TOO POOR TO BECOME A SURGEON

ORD NUFFIELD, £24,000,000 motor magnate, spread out long, thin fingers in front of him and coughed apologetically.

"You see, I had to do something with my hands," he said, "so I became a mechanic. But when I was a boy I dearly wanted to become a surgeon. No money in the family—so I couldn't get the training."

"Mechanics were the next best thing."

And in this shy, almost witless way, Lord Nuffield told why he has given £1,350,000 to Oxford University for medical training and research.

He revealed the real man—"Bill" Morris, who, by courage and hard work, built out of a "bike" shop, a great car industry.

"I was tired of working for myself. I was getting bored."

"Then I thought—well, I have earned the money. Now it can do some good. The alleviation of suffering. I thought it would be a grand thing to do something for that."

"England must lead the world in medicine and research."

Working For Others

"Now I am starting again, in a way. I'm working for other people. The shareholders who bought my shares—and the Oxford research centre."

Now those are great new interests. It gives me new zest thinking of them—a new incentive.

"I'm fatter than I've been for 20 years. I want to help other people to be as fit as I am."

He became "Bill" Morris again.

"Do you know the secret?" he asked. "Plenty of rest. No late nights. When I'm kept late, I go to bed next night at six or seven to make up for it."

He chuckled; then returned to gravity to explain his "medical scheme: How brilliant surgeons—the best in the country—would be taken from private practice to become teachers at Oxford, relieved of the worry of having to earn their own living. How they would train brilliant young students for the research institute and for surgery in a great cumulative effort of healing."

He planned the building of a Mauretania Hotel in New York or elsewhere, and the construction of a block of flats in Guernsey equipped with the ship's furniture.

But the plan fell through and the lease of the shed expires at the end of the month.

Yesterday and to-day, by order of the Receiver and Manager of the Mauretania Syndicate, Ltd., who now own the property, the panelings and furnishings were sold once again—for less than £1,000.

BIG BRASS LETTERS

Cabin B 95, for which 200 guineas was offered and refused last year, was disposed of for under £15. The big brass letters spelling "Mauretania" and "Mauretania Liverpool" from the port bow and the stern of the vessel, realised £11 for the set; at the original auction they were bought for over £210.

The complete drawing-room and smoke-room on B Deck and the first-class lounge were sold together for about £160; at the auction on board the vessel the mahogany panels in the lounge alone realised 250 guineas, while the dome of that same lounge, when the Mauretania was first built, cost £7,000.

Many mahogany pillars and much of the panelling have been sold for less than three pence a pound, passes, on which time and again the liner must have depended for her safety, realised 32s. 6d. the three.

With the breaking up of the Mauretania, scattered all over the world, the great ship shed, so soon to be scattered and for the most part destroyed, is merely second-hand and rather dated furniture.

Nazis Draw Teeth From 'Iron Maiden'

Nuremberg, Nov. 10.

One of the most famous instruments of medieval torture in the world, visited by hundreds of thousands of tourists every year—is to have her "teeth" extracted by order of the Nazi Kultur leaders.

The 'Maiden' consists of a bell-shaped iron shell, tall as a man. Outside it is fashioned like a smiling girl.

Inside long spikes jut inward; one at each eye-ball, one at the heart, some at the kidneys.

Once, prisoners sentenced to death by torture were clamped inside the Iron Maiden, and the hinges iron shackles were slowly screwed shut.

Now Nazi orders decree that the spikes in the removed at once from Iron Maiden.

The City Council of Nuremberg announced: "Scientific research has at last discovered that the Iron Maiden actually never was used; for such methods are not and never were, in accordance with the German instinct for justice."

800 PURSUERS

John Hector McDonald Harris, of Highfield Avenue, Grimsby, a 32-year-old seaman, was the next witness.

He denied that he sold to the land-lord of an hotel at Grimsby, "Oxford word from me and down goes both of them."

Mr. Scott asked Harris how many niggers were after them at Dakar.

Harris replied: "Seven hundred or eight hundred armed with sticks and all sorts of things." (Laughter.)

He said that the crew were very hungry when they got to Devil's Island. They caught some flying fish on the way.

The trial was adjourned.

WHY KNEE-ACTION WHEELS?

HERE ARE THE FACTS ON CHEVROLET KNEE-ACTION

Each front wheel is independently sprung, "stepping over" bumps with easy riding action. Knee Action wheels make the back seat as restful as the front, eliminating "back seat pitch."

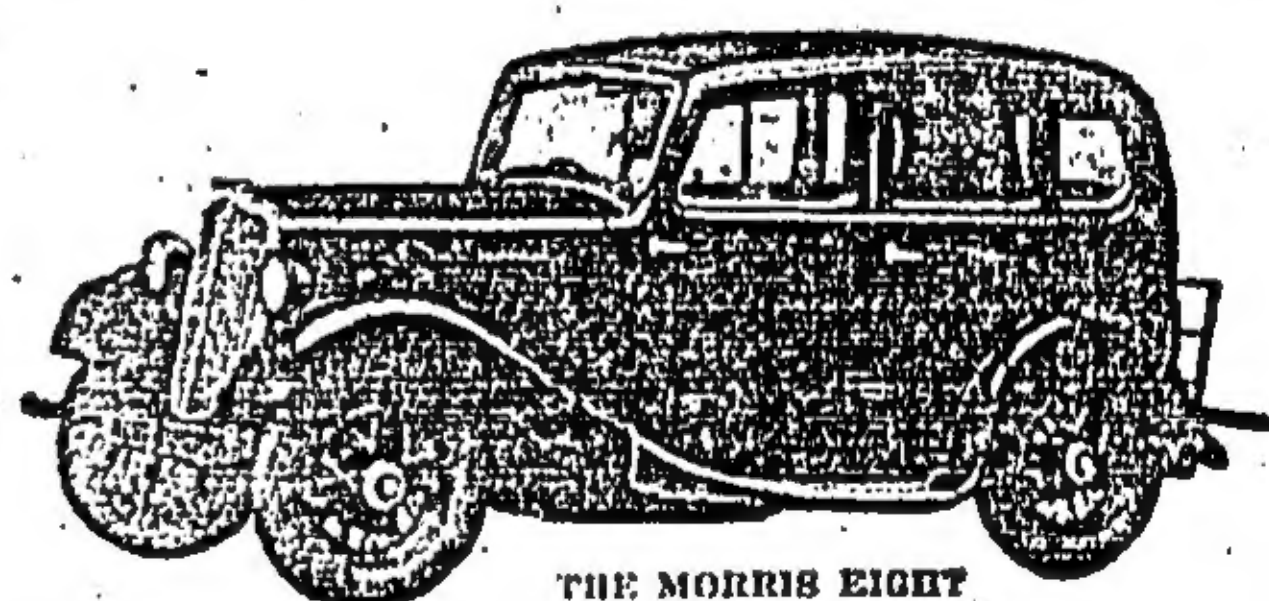

The Chevrolet type of Knee Action is much safer, permitting faster speeds on rough roads and preventing the car from "swaying" or "skidding."

Water, ice and stones cannot affect Chevrolet's Knee Action. Chevrolet Knee-Action permits the wheels to move straight up and down, preventing "tyre scrubbing" and giving longer tyre life.

TENNIS AT KOWLOON TONG

TOURNAMENT PROGRESS LATEST RESULTS

Considerable progress has been made during the last few weeks in the Kowloon Tong Club tennis tournament, and several events have now reached the semi-final stage.

Four competitions are in progress—men's singles championship, men's doubles championship, men's handicap singles and men's handicap doubles.

O. L. Pang has already reached the final of the handicap singles, while the other two semi-final brackets are filled. G. She and W. J. Howard have also reached the final of the doubles championship.

The complete results to date are as follows:

SINGLE CHAMPIONSHIP

First round byes:—O. L. Pang, Lam Kwan, H. Chan, S. A. Gray and O. Y. Pang.

First round:—A. Chan beat H. F. Un 6-1, 7-5. N.A.E. Mackay beat K. C. Yeo 6-0, 6-3. W. J. Howard beat A. Pang 6-0, 6-4.

Second round:—O. L. Pang beat Lam Kwan 6-2, 6-4. A. Chan beat N.A.E. Mackay 3-6, 6-1, 6-4. W. J. Howard beat O. Y. Pang 6-1, 6-3.

DOUBLE CHAMPIONSHIP

First round:—H. F. Un and Lam Kwan beat A. Pang and S. T. Chau, 6-0, 6-2.

Semi-Final:—G. She and W. J. Howard beat H. F. Un and Lam Kwan 6-0, 6-0, 6-2.

HANDICAP SINGLES

First round:—N.A.E. Mackay (owe 30) beat Peter Lo (rec. 15) 6-2, 6-1.

Second Round:—K. M. Lee (rec. 15) beat H. F. Un (rec. 3-6, 6-3, 6-2). F. Lao (rec. 3/6) beat A. C. Greaves (rec. 15) 7-5, 6-4. H. Chan (owe 40) beat S. T. Chau (owe 15) 6-3, 6-0. S. A. HOW ENGLAND BEAT IRELAND International Football

London, Nov. 18. England beat Ireland in an international football match at Stoke today by three goals to one, after the teams had crossed over at half time with a goal apiece to their credit.

Over 40,000 watched the game in ideal weather, though the ground was heavy after recent rains. The team turned out as originally advertised and Ireland won the toss.

They opened briskly, the Irish attack displaying resourcefulness and speed which had the English defence in difficulties.

DANGEROUS ATTACK

But the English forwards were the more dangerous in front of goal and in the first minute Johnson fired in a fast ground shot which Fulton, left back, saved on the goal line. Later the English goal nearly fell during a brief siege, but Male cleared from under the bar.

Garner of Sunderland opened England's account in the 31st minute, netting with a header from Worral's centre, but Davis of Oldham replied for Ireland 12 minutes later, beating Holdcroft with a terrific drive from close range.

England resumed strongly after the interval, with the forwards working together very methodically, making a strong contrast to the spasmodic Irish raids which were easily repulsed.

For the last 20 minutes of the game Ireland were penned in their own half. Bastin put the home team ahead in the 70th minute, and five minutes later Worral, after a combined movement between Johnson and Steele, made the issue safe.

Although well beaten Ireland went down fighting gamely. Johnson, Worral, Bastin, Gee and Britton were outstanding for England, while Davis made a resourceful leader of the Irish attack, and Breen's goal-keeping was a feature.—Reuter.

C. B. Wong and J. H. Lao (rec. 15) beat Y. H. Tang and K. M. Lee (rec. 15) 5-7, 6-1, 6-4.

Second round:—She and Yeo beat A. Pang and S. T. Chau (owe 30) 6-0, 6-2. Peter Lo and K. Cheng Yeo (rec. 15) 6-0, 6-4. Wong and Lao beat W. H. Wei and O. L. Pang (owe 30) 6-3, 7-5.

TAM KONG-PAK

Gave spectators one electrifying moment.

FARCICAL FOOTBALL MATCH

At Caroline Hill

LAUGHABLE

(By A Special Correspondent)

S. China "A" 0 S. China "B" 0

—Yesterday's postponed league football match between South China "A" and "B" at Caroline Hill resolved itself into a "slow bicycle race" type of game, the object apparently being for both teams to do their utmost to miss goals. Under these conditions the "B" team just about won: they lost some 25 goal-scoring chances to the "A" team's 20 odd. But as the football league take notice only of goals scored, the result was a draw, which delighted everybody except the spectators.

It was a painful, almost discreditable exhibition. No serious efforts were made to get the ball into the net, and it was not surprising to see half of the onlookers leave the ground in a disgusted frame of mind at half time.

The teams certainly succeeded in maintaining their individual unbroken records, but it cannot be said they enhanced their prestige in the process.

Once or twice Lai Shui-wing overstepped the mark, forgot his role, and started to play true to form. His efforts were greeted with bawling glances from the rest of the players, who quite clearly regarded the inside right as a renegade. However, they soon put Lai in his place by playing havoc with his passes. Thus soothed they continued to indulge in passing back tactics when a yard from goal, or kindly putting the ball on the toes of an opponent. It was all very, very friendly, though it was a little disappointing that the game never quite attained the furious excitement of a croquet match. Perhaps that is to be reserved for their second meeting.

There was one electrifying moment in this match: Tam Kong-pak decided to move from right back to centre-forward. What could it all mean? asked what spectators there were left. But if they thought it might lead to a goal they were sorely disappointed. True there was a bit more flourish in the "A" team attack, but it didn't amount to anything more, and for the most part, the quiet complaisant tone of the game proceeded to the bitter end.

Incidentally Royal Ulster Rifles and the Fusiliers weren't a bit upset about the result. Both benefitted to a certain extent, for it helped to consolidate their positions in the league table.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION IS THE CAUSE

Objections Are Not Likely

Awtar Singh, star Kowloon Indian Tennis Club centre-forward, has decided to quit his present team and to apply to the Mamak League Committee for permission to transfer to Radio Sports Club, his old club.

I had a conversation with Awtar Singh about this during the week. He said he was resigning from the K.I.T.C. because of a difference of opinion with some of the players.

His position so far as transferring to the Radio Sports Club is not altogether clear, as he has already played for K.I.T.C. in the Mamak league this season.

Nevertheless I do not imagine the Mamak Committee will place any obstacles in the way of his transferring. As a matter of fact it would be a fine sporting gesture on the part of the K.I.T.C. to agree to his transfer without which Awtar Singh will be prevented from playing for any other club in the Mamak League.

Awtar Singh did not participate in last Sunday's game, but judged by the score, K.I.T.C. did fairly well without him.

It is to be hoped for Awtar Singh's sake that things will be satisfactorily arranged.

Lieut. F. de O'Connell, "Father" of hockey in Macao, snapped as he was going on the field to referee a recent match. His team met and beat The Royal Corps of Signals, Hongkong, last Sunday.

CAER CUP GAME

St. Andrew's Attack Was Weak

HONGKONG LADIES ON TOP

Hongkong Ladies garnered further Caer Cup points at the expense of St. Andrew's last week, winning on the U.S.R.C. ground by two goals to nil.

The losers started in whirlwind fashion and had the ex-champions pinned in their own half for the first ten minutes. But their efforts were not crowned with success, and Hongkong, slowly recovering, finally managed to take control of the game.

Miss Pope was always prominent at centre-half, and she was largely instrumental in the superiority asserted by the Hongkong team after the first quarter of an hour.

It was a neat movement which led to the first goal. Miss. Prophet received from Miss M. Smalley and pushed the ball out to Miss C. Ferguson, who went on to beat Mrs. Igoe with a slow shot which the custodian attempted to kick clear, but missed completely.

This reverse had the effect of putting St. Andrew's on their toes, and they went back to another series of smart attacks which fully tested the opposition.

GREAT CHANCE MISSED

Immediately after the interval Miss P. Gittins, Saints' centre-forward, made a splendid break-away and actually had the goal at her mercy; but she hesitated too long and instead of putting her side on level terms as appeared inevitable, allowed Miss J. Smalley to cut in and clear. After this St. Andrew's appeared to lose heart, and there was a noticeable falling away in all departments.

It therefore came as no surprise when Mrs. Harrop took a pass first time and scored with a fast rising shot past a crowd of players.

Miss M. Smalley, Miss Marsh and Mrs. Harrop combined well for the Hongkong team and constituted a dangerous attack. Miss Pope and Miss J. Dalziel did good work in the half back line, and while Miss Grey was the better of the two backs, Miss J. Smalley was very safe in goal.

Though they had a goodly share of the game, St. Andrew's, never, with one exception, looked like scoring. Miss P. Gittins played a lone game, although Miss F. Wong tried hard on the right wing. Miss J. Wong was not quite up to standard at centre-half, though I believe she felt unwell before taking the field. Miss J. Humphreys was a good account of herself at right half and was well backed by Miss G. White in the line of defence.

CAN PLAYERS BE MOVED FROM TEAM TO TEAM?

Query Raised By Some Mamak League Competitors

CAN a club which has two teams in the Mamak Tournament shift "B" team players into the "A" team? This is the question now being asked by a number of players, and the reply seems to be in the affirmative.

Actually there is no rule governing the position, but as "B" teams are generally recognised as being inferior to "A" teams, there does not seem to be any tangible reason why "B" players should not be put into senior teams.

At the same time it is certainly essential to guard against the possible practice of transferring "A" players to "B" teams. To do this would not be "hockey". At their last meeting the Mamak Committee decided to leave the question to the discretion of club secretaries, but I think I can state authoritatively that the committee would very soon sit up and take notice if clubs started to abuse the privilege.

It just isn't done!

MAMAK LEAGUE TOURNAMENT

Pyara Singh Scores Four Times For Champions

SOLDIERS' TEAM OUTPLAYED

Four goals by Pyara Singh was the feature of the Kowloon Indian Tennis Club's five-nil victory over "D" Company, Royal Ulster Rifles in a Mamak Tournament match last Sunday.

Pyara Singh opened his account within the first few minutes, when he converted a pass from Pinto, and he added another before the interval.

The soldiers came more into the limelight during the first five minutes of the second half, but they were repulsed and K.I.T.C. took up the running with the result that Karnail Singh, who was in irresistible form, sent Noronha away, who in turn passed in to Pyara Singh to score No. 3.

Thereafter the Indians were always in the picture and a penalty bully gave Pyara Singh his fourth chance which he quickly seized. Pinto, who was off form most of the game added the fifth.

A. P. Sousa played exceptionally well, his accurate passing being a feature, while Tara Singh, Pereira and Pyara Singh were always in the limelight.

The soldiers were valiant rather than skilful players. But the defence was not too sound and appeared at a loss to deal with the clever Pyara Singh. The goalkeeper was easily the best performer for the losers.

Sketch of the new covered tennis courts at Torquay

England's Biggest Covered
Tennis Courts

The erection of three covered courts at the Palace Hotel, Torquay, is another concession to the growing demand for lawn tennis by day and night and whatever the weather, and will at last provide a centre for covered court play in Devon.

These new covered courts adjoin the hard courts and are the last word in covered court construction. There is a clear floor space of 120 feet by 120 feet, and the roof is higher than that of any other court in England, and as there are no supporting pillars it allows space for three courts. Lighting by day or night is shadowless.

The floor is of American white wood, painted green, the wood which has been found to give the nearest bound to that of a good grass or hard court.

The spectators are well provided for in galleries round the courts, tip-up seats are provided, and there is room for over a thousand people to watch the play. The building includes dressing-rooms, accommodation, and there is in addition a first-class restaurant. The cost was in the neighbourhood of £12,000.

A. C. Roberts is the resident professional available for coaching lessons or practice.

At the official opening of the courts on November 14 and 15, exhibition matches were played, in which D. W. Butler, C. E. Hare, G. P. Hughes, H. G. N. Lee, F. H. D. James, Miss E. A. Dourman, Miss F. Wides, Miss R. M. Hardwick, Miss M. Heales, Miss N. M. Lytle, and Miss Dorothy Round took part. Mr. H. Koper Barrett performed the opening ceremony.

FRIENDLY HOCKEY
Kowloon Indians Beat
Navy "A" Team

In a friendly hockey match played on the Hongkong Hockey Club ground at King's Park yesterday, the Kowloon Indian Hockey Club senior team defeated a Navy "A" eleven by four goals to one.

The Kowloon Indians played with only ten men in the first half, which ended with the score at 1-1. A reserve turned up, however, in the second half, and then the Indians had matters much their own way, three more goals being registered. The scorers were Pyara Singh and J. M. Pinto, each of whom netted twice.

Play was fast throughout.

8th Destroyer Flotilla Lost to Club

In a friendly hockey game played at King's Park yesterday, the Club defeated the 8th Destroyer Flotilla by four goals to nil. The game was fast and exciting and had it not been for H. F. Shields, the goalkeeper, and R. L. Wallace and E. V. Reed, the full-backs the Club would probably not have won so easily. These players put up a sound game and were largely instrumental in preventing the sailors from scoring.

B. L. Bickford opened the score for the Club almost right from the commencement and before the interval S. A. Fowler put them further ahead.

Shortly after the resumption G. E. R. Divett increased the score to three goals in favour of the Club, and just before the end, Fowler scored again.

a bright attack, but Miss F. Best was the leading luminary, her efforts on the right wing being very impressive.

The Recreo were clearly at a loss on the uneven grass surface after becoming accustomed to a sand pitch, and most of the players were unsettled by this. However Miss O. Hotello and Miss C. Osmund put up a stout defence and were bravely assisted by Mrs. L. Silva and Miss P. Xavier in the half back line. Miss C. Silva and Miss M. Roza were the pick of an intelligent attack.

Since the Civilian half of the tournament is over I can't see that it would matter if these Portuguese players were included in the Argonauta eleven.

I would certainly hesitate before offering a dogmatic opinion on the question, but I think it worth the while of Argonautas to bring it before the Hongkong Hockey Association for consideration.

SELANGRO'S SUICIDE

TRAGIC END OF FRENCH MINISTER

Paris, Nov. 17.
The death has occurred of Roger Selangro, Minister of the Interior in M. Blum's Popular Front government.

It will be recalled that M. Selangro was recently vindicated by a Government Commission, presided over by General Gamelin, Chief of the French Army General Staff, of charges of cowardice during the Great War.

There was a violent scene in the Chamber of Deputies on November 13, when the Question of M. Selangro's military record was debated, about 50 delegates being involved in a scuffle, and the sitting had to be suspended.

Later, M. Selangro committed suicide. He was found in a room with windows and doors closed and gas taps turned on.—Reuter.

Mrs. A. W. Ingram, wife of the Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., is leaving Melbourne by the steamer Nellore on December 2 after a vacation in Australia. Mrs. Ingram will be accompanied by her daughter, Ruth.

Gale Strikes Britain

LIFEBOATS' HEROIC ADVENTURES

London, Nov. 18.

Several shipping casualties are reported as the result of a 70 m.p.h. gale which swept the southern part of the North Sea and the English Channel today.

Fishing vessels off the Norfolk coast were forced to return for shelter.

The crew of ten of the Glasgow steamer Yewbank, 621 tons, were rescued by the Winterton lifeboat after the vessel had been driven ashore near Great Yarmouth this afternoon.

The Gorleston lifeboat, which also went to the Yewbank's assistance, was struck by terrific seas and two of the crew washed overboard, but were rescued by ropes. The lifeboat's steering gear was wrecked, but she ultimately returned with a temporary rudder.

A small drifter with all eight members of her crew, sunk off Great Yarmouth. Other small craft were driven ashore, but the crews were saved.

New York, Nov. 18.

S. C. & F. Dow Jones summary of yesterday's markets:—The market today was irregular on heavy profit-taking. Heavy dividend increases continued, however. A step-up in anticipated in steel production owing to the expected price increases. Retail buying is heavy, but professional traders are cautious, anticipating a market adjustment later. The Bonds Market and the Curb Exchange were both irregular.

S. C. & F. Our New York office cables:

Stocks: The market today reflects a certain amount of profit-taking, but the undertone remains firm.

Cotton: Prices were under pressure of increased hedging and liquidation. There was some December Trade demand on the scale down, but no aggressive support.

Wheat: The mill market and the foreign markets were firmer. Offerings from the country were smaller. An increased demand for flour is reported.

Corn: Some short-covering on a tight December situation was a factor in today's trading. There was an early upturn in prices, but profit-taking occurred later. Receipts were fair, but supplies were not pressing. The cash situation is firm.

Rubber: Consumption for October amounted to 49,500 tons. A strike is reported to have occurred at a large Akron rubber plant. The action of the London market is disappointing.

S. C. & F. Wall Street Journal morning comment: There is a good chance that the Western Union will declare a year-end dividend in Mid-December, possibly of around $3. It is expected that Montgomery Ward will increase their dividend next week. Some traders are selling due to the belief that the labour situation in the United States is bad. Brokers report increasing interest in utilities. Some bulls are advising the buying of General Motors and Chrysler shares at around the present levels.

Mrs. Marion Pierce, who once won a beauty competition, had been searching for her husband for a month, armed with a warrant for his arrest.

When he was brought up in court she demanded $10,000 bail.

"What has this man done—committed murder?" exclaimed the judge.

"No," said Mrs. Pierce, "but he has caused me to lose weight. He abandoned me a year ago and can best be described as a playboy."

Mr. Pierce's income was put at $600 a month and bail was fixed at $5,000.

Japy recently came into prominence when, with Maurice Arnoux, he crashed at Karachi while leading in the Paris-Suigon air race. The retractable undercarriage of their machine jammed, and they circled the field for 35 minutes until their petrol became exhausted, when they made a crash landing.

Mr. Japy has not received the communication, stated to have been sent by the Japanese Minister of Communication, forbidding him to fly direct from Hongkong to Tokyo.

He is emphatic that, if weather conditions appear suitable when he reaches Foochow, he will attempt the hazardous oversea crossing from there.

If he arrives at Tokyo at 8 p.m. to-night, the actual elapsed time since he left Paris will be 84 hours, easily a record. The actual flying time will be approximately 50 hours.

JAPY RISKS LIFE TO TAKE OVER-LOADED PLANE OFF FROM H.K. SETS AMAZING PACE ON LONE FLIGHT FROM PARIS TO TOKYO

By "TELEGRAPH" STAFF REPORTER

This morning, in the pitch darkness that precedes the dawn I witnessed one of the most startling take-offs in the history of Kai Tak Airport.

Almost beside himself with anxiety at the delay that threatened to rob him of the most astonishing distance record ever attempted by one man, M. Andre Japy, the French aviator who has already made history by his flight from Paris to Hongkong, decided shortly after 5 a.m. to take the biggest chance of his career.

A stiff northerly wind that whistled down the mountains in the background of Kai Tak had for ten hours, made suicidal any attempt to take off.

Shortly after 4.30 a.m., the wind became gusty instead of continuous. M. Japy decided to risk all by taking off during one of the all-too-brief spells of calm.

Two Airport officials, a compatriot and one lone newspaperman were the only spectators.

Their hearts stood still as, engine wide open, the heavily laden, red plane bumped across the entire length of the field—a distance of 800 yards—without rising.

In the darkness—relieved by nothing but half-a-dozen guiding flares and the lights of the plane—it seemed to the spectators that the two wheels of the machine were still on the ground as the plane went over the sea-wall.

For two hundred yards, the plane was less than six feet above sea-level as it skimmed across the harbour.

Then, its one propeller grilling, it commenced to rise, and within five minutes had disappeared from sight.

Greatly Overweight

When the plane was wheeled out of the hangar at Kai Tak it was 1,200 lbs. overweight, a danger made necessary by the large amount of petrol needed to carry it from Hongkong to Tokyo—a distance of approximately 2,800 miles—without refuelling.

At 4 a.m., despairing of the decrease in the strength of wind necessary to permit a take-off in any direction except by flying into the mountains, M. Japy decided to dump 70 gallons of his precious fuel, and fly to Shanghai to refuel.

He had actually given the order for the fuel to be dumped when the wind became more favourable.

Half an hour later he abandoned the contemplated change of plans and decided to risk a take-off with a full load.

Troubles Ahead

Even now, however, his troubles are not over. Doubt exists regarding the weather conditions over the East China Sea and M. Japy told me, a few minutes before he took off, that he had decided to follow the Chinese coasting, to Foochow, before deciding whether to land at Shanghai or to attempt the hazardous 3,000 mile sea crossing from Foochow to Tokyo.

If he decides on the latter course, he expects to arrive at Tokyo at 6 p.m. this evening.

If, however, weather conditions make it advisable to land at Shanghai, M. Japy expects to reach the northern city at about 9.30 a.m., and to arrive at Tokyo at about 8.30 p.m.

His flight from Paris to Hongkong is one of the most remarkable solo efforts in the history of aviation. He left the French capital at 6 a.m. on Monday and 58 hours later was in Hongkong.

During the whole time he had only 15 minutes sleep. He originally intended departing at 8 p.m. last night for Tokyo, but even the small reserve of time such an early departure would have necessitated did not drive him to rest. For fully two hours after his arrival yesterday, M. Japy went carefully over every part of his machine and supervised the refuelling, carried out by the Shell organisation.

Then, and not until then, would he consent to snatch a little sleep. He was out at the aerodrome again at 7.45 p.m., and his disappointment at the sudden northerly wind that made his departure impossible was intense.

It was not until 10 p.m. that he would consent to return to rest. He was back again at the airport at 2.15 (Continued on Page 5.)

WAR DEBT PARLEYS RE-OPEN

FRANCE APPROACHES UNITED STATES

BUT WITHOUT FIRM OFFER

Paris, Nov. 19.

It is learned in unimpeachable quarters that France has re-opened the War Debt question with the United States with a view to resuming payments of overdue annuities as soon as possible after an agreement is reached "writing down" the debt total.

It is understood that the Under-Secretary of State, Mr. Francis B. DeLoach, thoroughly discussed the debt situation with President F. D. Roosevelt while he was in America as the official French representative for the Statue of Liberty anniversary celebrations.

M. DeLoach returned to France on Wednesday and made a detailed report to the Prime Minister, M. Leon Blum, and the Foreign Minister, M. Yves Delbos, indicating that a basis of discussion has already been established although no firm French offer has yet been made.—United Press.

SALENGRO ACCUSES ACCUSERS

"RESPONSIBLE FOR MY DEATH"

Lille, Nov. 18.

The suicide of M. Roger Salengro, French Minister of Interior, is attributed to depression caused by the recent death of his wife, coupled with the venomous political attacks on his war record. Mass demonstrations by the Leftists against Salengro's assailants are anticipated to-morrow.

In a most pathetic letter addressed to M. Leon Blum, Prime Minister, M. Salengro said: "My wife died as the result of calumny against me, which has also eaten my mother's heart."

"I have fought hard, but I am beaten. They did not succeed in dishonouring me, but they bear the responsibility for my death. Neither a deserter nor a traitor, my party has been my life and joy."

M. Blum's eyes were filled with tears as he read the letter with bowed head before the body of his friend.—Reuter.

Mystery Flier Due Here

ON WAY FROM HANOI TO HONGKONG

It was learned at Kai Tak aerodrome to-day that an unidentified aircraft is flying here from Hanoi and is due this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Hanoi cabled Hongkong this morning to the effect that "Lettion," presumably the pilot, left Hanoi at 9.35 a.m. and was due to arrive in this Colony at 2.30.

Local authorities cannot identify this plane, but it is possible that it is following Andre Japy's meteoric passage to Japan.

Later, at 2.30 p.m. a Russian aircraft, named Letton, put his machine down at Kai Tak. He is from Hanoi, and is flying by easy stages to Tokyo.

AMID SCENE OF DESOLATION

London, Nov. 18.

"This town is poor but loyal," stretched across the grey stone front of a broken-down cottage, epitomised the welcome which the poor folk of Dowlais gave His Majesty the King when he visited to-day what has been called "the blackest spot in South Wales."

There is scarcely a family here which is not on the dole or public relief.

When the King arrived at the great, gaunt shell of the derelict steel factory, which formerly was the mainstay of the town's existence, with a wage bill of £30,000, he was greeted by wild cheers.

His car passed under the famous Coal Arch erected at the entrance to the factory at the time of His Late Majesty's visit, when the town was in the hey-day of its prosperity, two years before the Great War.

To-day the new King walked amid scenes of desolation, where rusting factory chimneys, ovens and furnaces and crumbling masonry bore witness to the tragedy of the depression. He was accompanied by the former managing-director of the firm which owned the premises.

Another and larger place struck by the hand of misfortune, and which the King has visited, is Merthyrtydfwl, yet here, as at Dowlais, the loyalty of the suffering population was demonstrated beyond any doubt.—Reuter Special.

TUMULTUOUS RECEPTION

London, Nov. 18.

His Majesty the King was accorded a tumultuous reception in every town and village which he visited during his sixty mile tour to-day of the distressed areas of South Wales and displayed the keenest interest in the various social service activities and well-help movements which have been set on foot throughout the area.

It was no perfunctory visit. Formalities were almost entirely dispensed with and the King moved about the people, went into their homes and discussed with them their hardships. During the afternoon it became known that Mr. Malcolm Stewart, whose report made before he resigned his post as Chief Commissioner for Distressed Areas, was the main subject of the all-night sitting of the House of Commons last night, and his successor in office, Sir

China Prepared To Meet Invasion

Peiping, Nov. 19.

A three-hour battle in the region of Hungkehertu, in East Suiyuan, has been fought between the Chinese defenders and the Manchurian and Mongol invaders. Supported by artillery the Chinese troops drove off the attack.

The Chinese claim to have counted 300 of their enemies slain on the field and to have captured a motor car, horse transport and radio plant, together with commissariat.

Marshal Chiang Kai-shek returned to Loyang with his staff this afternoon.—Reuter.

PLAN OF RESISTANCE

Nanking, Nov. 19.

The Chinese press here to-day quotes Marshal Chiang Kai-shek as saying, in a speech delivered before Taiyuan officials, that the Government has a comprehensive resistance plan to meet any threatened invasion through Suiyuan and that full preparations have been made to meet it.

Marshal Chiang returned to Loyang this afternoon.—Reuter.

Arms Replenishment

Shanghai, Nov. 19.

One of the main results of the reported Japanese-German agreement will be the completion of Japan's 3,000,000 yen military replenishment programme in three to four years instead of six, according to reliable sources here.

Under a barter or credit arrangement, German war materials, including aeroplanes and tanks, will be used for the necessary mechanisation of the Japanese army, the details of which were emphasised in recent manoeuvres.

Official Chinese circles withhold comment, but the Chinese Government is particularly interested in the anti-Communist aspects of the agreement. In view of the current Japanese pressure upon Nanking to join the Japanese Government against the Reds.

Meanwhile, further Japanese negotiations in this direction have been further jeopardised by the Suiyuan adventure, which may form the subject of a formal protest by the subject of a formal protest by

New Turn To Spanish War?

London, Nov. 19.

The Italo-German recognition of the rebel Government in Spain, following so closely on General Franco's declaration of his intention of instituting a blockade of Barcelona where Russian arms are reported to have been arriving, is thought in some quarters to presage a significant new phase to the Spanish struggle.

The Daily Telegraph in an editorial to-day expresses the fear that the Italo-German gesture foreshadows the taking of sides in more than a sentimental sense and confirms the impression gained from the beginning that it was not from Communist quarters alone that foreign influences were working, determined to mould Spain into a new political form agreeable to outside powers, regardless of the cost to Spain's unhappy citizens.—Reuter.

REBELSWATCH MADRID BURN

Correspondent Tells Of City's Plight

Lisbon, Nov. 19.

"We were like Nero watching Rome burning," remarked a popular toreador, Senor Pepe, now a Nationalist officer, as he watched the operations against Madrid last night from a tower above General Varela's headquarters. General Varela's troops were the first to smash through the outer loyalist lines and reach Madrid city proper.

Senor Pepe's remark was apt, for lurid flames stabbed the night sky from all parts of Madrid and 100 flaming parachutes fluttered down from raiding aeroplanes enabling the bombers to choose their targets more easily.

The whole insurgent General Staff and many newspaper correspondents watched the fantastic spectacle from a distance.—Reuter.

Terrible Destruction

Madrid, Nov. 19.

(From Reuter's Special Correspondent, Mr. J. R. Allwork.) I ventured out to-day during a brief lull in the bombardment and was appalled at the destruction.

There are huge craters in the main streets and scores of ruined buildings, many of them still aflame. The main squares resemble scenes from war films.

I went to visit a friend in Mendizabal Street and found both my friend and his house had disappeared. The actual fighting fronts are practically unchanged though the insurgents claim to have progressed in the northern sector of Madrid. They have apparently suffered severely from a withering fire. Meanwhile, the loyalists, according to broadcast despatches, claim that over 40,000 men have arrived to assist in the defence of the capital.—Reuter.

FARM PRODUCTS FOR GERMAN WEAPONS

ENVOY LEAVES FOR BERLIN

Vienna, Nov. 18.

An economic agreement with Germany, under which large-scale re-arming would be effected, is being sought by the Foreign Secretary, Dr. Guido Schmidt, who left for Berlin to-day. It is considered significant that the Austrian Minister is accompanied by Freiherr von Papen, the German Minister at Vienna, on the first official state visit of an Austrian Cabinet Minister to Germany in four years.

It is the proposal of the Austrian Government that Germany should buy Austria's surplus grain and timber products of which Germany is much in need, and sell in return war planes, tanks and heavy artillery.

Hitherto, the low prices Germany has offered for Austrian goods, for example, two pence a pound for butter, have caused a deadlock in negotiations, but it is believed that Dr. Schmidt's mission will eliminate all obstacles.

Austria's determination to re-arm to the teeth is evidenced by her introduction of conscription in April, the increase by 60 per cent. in her army expenditure and the declaration of her right to re-arm on November 12.—Reuter.

Roosevelt Intervenes In Strike

SHIPS WILL CARRY FOOD TO ALASKA

LINER ELUDES UNIONS' GRIP

Washington, Nov. 18.

Before his departure for Buenos Aires to-day, President F. D. Roosevelt issued an executive order authorising the Alaska Railroad to charter ships to operate a coastwise passenger, mail and freight service in order to alleviate the shortage of food supplies in the northern territory which has resulted from the prolonged maritime strike.

This is the first instance on record of direct presidential intervention and the instructions, significantly, coincided with a secret New York meeting between Mr. J. W. Curran and Mr. John Lewis which may have a bearing on negotiations aimed at breaking the deadlock.

The Department of the Interior has announced it is accepting bids soon for the chartering of private vessels to carry food to Alaska.—United Press.

ELUDES TIE-UP

New York, Nov. 18.

The American-owned luxury liner, Washington, left her pier three-quarters of an hour late to-day and remained anchored in the harbour while officials of the Steamboat Inspection Service investigated charges that incompetent hands were employed to replace the strikers.

Extraordinary scenes were witnessed before the Washington's departure. Since midnight 300 strikers had been on picket duty, and passengers were hurried through the picket lines under police escort.

Nobody was allowed aboard the liner except those persons actually sailing. Stones were thrown at taxis suspected of bringing strike-breakers to the ship, but otherwise there were no disorders.—Reuter.

Later, The Steamboat Inspector, Mr. George Fernald, examined and found unfit for service several men of the crew of the liner Washington, who were replacing strikers. The vessel's sailing was delayed for six hours.—United Press.

Paris says

Shorter, simpler hair styles

PARIS predicts the return of the shingle. Curls are still in the forward movement, but they are being severely curbed by the hair stylists in favour of a smooth line that shows the shape of the head at the back. All of which is good news for the woman who likes a practical hair-dressing.

The coiffure Robb has sketched for you is one of this autumn's style winners.

Points to Notice: Smooth, cup-like effect at the back. Smooth, roulean effect, up and away from the ears, in front. Flat, adjustable curls near crown.

Winning Points: Style is practical, for it does not need a twice-weekly setting at the hairdresser's. It can easily be kept in place without setting lotions or acres of hairpins. The smooth roll, which keeps neat all day, can be broken up and worn in flat curls, if desired, at night. The style looks equally well with a centre or a side parting. It is becoming to most faces.

Points to Remember

Before embarking on this (or any other new hair style, for that matter) have your hair shaped and tapered by the best hair-dresser you can afford to go to.

Although in the new and smoother hair-dressing which will be worn this autumn, a sleek effect is aimed at, the hair must be supple and a hard effect is to be avoided.

Drawn by
ROBB

When dressing the hair in the new roulean-shingle style place the hand firmly down on the side of the head and comb through the short front pieces (leaving the small curls out of it for the moment) over the finger. If the hair was properly set it should emerge in a crisp, shining roll. For combing and setting the small, flat curls a fine toothed tail comb is a necessity.

MOLLY CASTLE, in Hollywood, has just had a baby daughter. Here she tells you how she adopted Japanese ideas in

A SUITCASE is a fine thing with which to travel round the world, but it must be one of the expanding kind.

Mine wasn't expansive enough, however, to take in all I acquired in China and Japan, and I found myself leaving the Orient with a knobbly cotton-covered package, that looked like a washerwoman's bundle.

The Japanese carry all their luggage in squares of strong, brightly printed cotton, and the idea has its points. So out of my suitcase came all the books and bulk, and into it went my new Chinese dresses, my Japanese kimono.

Plan for Elegance

THOSE prospective mothers who can go around draped in furs (you lucky ones who have the winter ahead of you), or those who live in the wilds and just don't care, get on pretty well; but in a hot country, in cities, in dinner dress, for what goes under a winter coat, you have to plan a little to look elegant.

A material which is about as many-purposed as any I have yet

found is Chinese gauze. I am pretty sure you can get it in England; it is a kind of second cousin to silk, not but closer woven, stiffer, less crushable.

The kind I bought had a pattern woven into it: a mandarin medallion. It's the sort of stuff that, like net, makes up particularly well into the smooth, swifter-jacket-cut, which luckily has been very popular this year.

Clouds of tulle make the visibility very bad and can be peered at from every angle, except an angle right in front of my eye. Light, without disclosing so much as a hint of a silhouette. But tulle will only do for evening.

So, out of my Chinese gauze I had a day dress made, with a smocky little jacket to go over it. The dress has a wrap-over skirt with press fasteners round at least half of it. You can use any that you happen to need.

The coat can be worn with a long skirt for dinner.

They don't Fidget

WHEN I finally got around to seeing a Japanese doctor I learned practically nothing from him except how to treat shock caused by trying, single-handed, to take on the Pacific Ocean, and it was my husband who had the misadventure with the waves. For myself (and for you) I learned more from a study of the Japanese women, and from an American girl who had been studying them even longer.

The Japanese women seem to have no nerves at all. There they sit, on their heels, for hours at a time, without fidgeting or moving. Unless their hands are needed they can keep them perfectly still. I think it is something to do with knowing how to relax.

This young American I was telling you about came to Japan with her nerves all raw at the edges. She watched Japanese women and learned from them.

Learn to Relax

ASIDE from learning to relax, the first thing she did was to cut down on stimulants—alcohol, cigarettes, coffee, and strong tea. The relaxing took time, and she practised in bed at night.

The thing to do, she told me, was to try to sink through the bed, consciously seeing to it that each leg, each arm, even each foot, hand, finger, was all loosened up, letting go with its full weight. Before she had had time to go all tensed up again she was asleep.

She ate regularly instead of at all hours, but never just after she had had any mental upset. She didn't read at meals either.

In fact, if she hadn't felt so marvellously well after her treatment life would have been hardly any fun at all.

MID-WEEK PROBLEMS

by Hubert Phillips

TOM, DICK AND HARRY

On the famous island of Puz-El-Yu there are three types of inhabitant who are physically indistinguishable from one another. They are known, however, as the Whites, the Blacks, and the Yellows. A White, when asked a question, invariably gives a truthful answer; a Black invariably gives an untruthful answer; a Yellow alternately lies and tells the truth, though one cannot tell whether his first answer will be a truthful one or not.

Three inhabitants—a White, a Black and a Yellow—were lounging on the beach. Their names (not necessarily respectively) were Tom, Dick and Harry. A traveller accosted the first one and the following dialogue ensued:

"What is your name?"

"Tom, Sir."

"Are you White, Black or Yellow?"

"Black, Sir."

"What is the name of your White friend?"

"Dick, Sir."

"What is the name of the Yellow?"

PROBLEM II

CUTT AND THRUST

Cutt and Thrust are two cricketing friends who occasionally play for the Ditherers. They have just informed me of a very curious fact. During each of the last three seasons they have played, between them, 12 innings (all completed) and have scored, between them, 240 runs. Thus in each season their combined average has been 20. Strange to say, however, Cutt's average each season has been exactly double Thrust's, in spite of the fact that in no two seasons has either player made the same number of runs.

In each season, moreover, both Cutt's average and Thrust's have been whole numbers.

What are the respective aggregates of Cutt and Thrust for the three seasons' play?

IS YOUR NAME PAMELA?

Symbol: A resting place by the roadside.

THIS name expresses happy good nature, delight in giving, perfect friendship.

Saturday is the lucky day, the hour of 4 p.m. is the luckiest, and the 17th of the month holds the best fortune.

Shades of wine and gold are well suited to the vibrations of your name, and will make all the difference to you if you use them freely.

Sapphires set in gold will bring you luck, and among flowers, the wild king-cup is assigned to you. The number eight is significant and fortunate for you.

Russian Recipes

JUST a short line to give you these other recipes from Russia I promised you. First, the authentic way to make good Bortsch.

Peel a dozen tomatoes, cut up a quantity of cabbage, celery and other green vegetables, and place in a large stewpan with salt, pepper, soup meat and bones. Cover with water and boil slowly for four or five hours, removing the scum as it rises and adding water as required.

Cut up some fat bacon into small pieces and pound in a mortar with flour. Cool a little of the soup and work it in by degrees, and when sufficiently liquid add to the rest in the stewpan. Add a little vinegar to taste and let it all boil gently for half an hour.

Then add some whole potatoes, peeled and washed, and boil gently for another half-hour. Remove the bones and serve in a tureen. Serve at the same time a dish of cream, preferably sour.

Try these stuffed Tomatoes

THIS is an excellent Russian way of dealing with tomatoes. Choose well-shaped ones, cut the tops off, and scoop out the insides. Make a stuffing of minced raw meat, boiled rice, chopped onion and herbs, well seasoned with salt and pepper. Fill the tomatoes and replace the tops.

Put the scooped-out tomatoes into a fireproof dish with a sprinkling of chopped onion and parsley. Arrange the tomatoes on top of this and bake in a moderate oven till cooked through. Then pour carefully between (not over) the tomatoes a quantity of thick cream, about half a pint for six tomatoes.

Replace in the oven till the cream is thoroughly heated, and serve in the same dish as you cooked them in.

New sort of Sandwich

GREEN CAVIARE makes a tasty sandwich filling. Bake some aubergines till they are tender and soft. Scoop out the insides and chop small with little onions, olives, chilli, salt and pepper. Season with olive oil, vinegar, and a very little Worcester sauce.

Lastly, Kisel is an economical and easy to make fruit dish. Take any remains of stewed fruit and juice. Add water, boil and thicken with potato flour and serve.

Yours,

Rose Marie

HUSBAND & WIFE WERE BOTH BIGAMISTS

Bitter Outbursts In Court

London Nov. 8.

Husband and wife followed each other into the dock at Dorset Assizes yesterday, and both were found guilty of bigamy.

So bitter were their outbursts against each other that, when the time came to pass judgment, Mr. Justice Charles said:—

"I don't know if I should put the husband in the dock with the wife. The wonder will have to intervene his small frame between them."

The woman interposed: "Oh, I won't do anything to him."

So, with the wonder between them, the couple stood in the dock.

"DON'T BELIEVE EITHER"

Addressing the woman first, Mr. Justice Charles said that he was disinclined to send her to jail, but if he did not he could not send the man, because they were as bad as one another.

"You both don't care a penny about decency or law," he continued. "You both wanted to go off with somebody else, and off you went. You both have lied. I don't believe either of you."

The couple were Frederick Roberts Majuba Cooke, aged 36, of Parkstone, who was charged with bigamously marrying Florence Pounds at Poole, and Mrs. Hannah May Cooke, also 36, charged with bigamously marrying Percy John Weston at Lymington.

OTHER WOMAN'S STORY

Mrs. Cooke gave evidence that her husband went away with another woman in 1931. She saw him in London the next

Story told to the Congregational Union Assembly at Birmingham by a London Deacon, Mr. J. B. Gottis:

In a certain town the Free Churches and the Church of England representatives formed a social council and dealt successfully with various social evils. When it came to slum clearance, there seemed to be something wrong and they got no farther.

Then it was discovered that three members of this council were themselves owners of slum property. One was a churchwarden, another was a deacon, and the third was the brother of a missionary.

The scheme was killed within three years—by its own members and the ridicule of its opponents.

year, sent him £10 later, and received a letter from him stating that a divorce had gone through, and that if she waited six months she would be free to marry him.

Florence Pounds said that Cooke told her he had been divorced and was free to marry.

Challenge To Queen Mary

By A Special Correspondent. Southampton, Nov. 10.

AN American rival to the Queen Mary, and the Normandie was hinted at by Mr. P. A. S. Franklin, chairman of the International Mercantile Marine, who arrived here to-day in the Queen Mary.

"The idea is in the background of our schemes," he admitted to me, "but I would not like to say anything definite yet."

"It will cost so much to put her in service again, and she costs such a lot to operate that I doubt whether she will go into service again, even though the Corporation next year will mean a great boom in American tourist traffic to England."

"Work will start on the sister ship of our Manhattan and Washington at the end of the year. She will be an improvement on them, and should be commissioned by the end of 1939."

Harry G. Prentiss went down to the Cunard pier at New York to see some friends off in the Queen Mary. They threw a party in their tourist class cabin, and when the party ended they were well out to sea.

Poor Harry was very frightened and hid himself away. But only for 24 hours.

He thought the best thing to do was to give himself up. He was taken to the bridge, where Captain Sir Edgar Britten decided that he was not a real stowaway.

He gave him a job of work to do in the ship, and he was landed at Southampton to-day, and not locked up on condition that he returns to America by the very next boat.

ACE GIRLS SWIMMER FORFEITING FAME FOR MAN SHE LOVES

RIE MASTENBROEK, the world's speediest woman swimmer, now only 17, will forsake the water for a husband and a home.

The fair-haired Dutch girl has been making a short swimming tour in England. When she returned to London, she spoke of her romance.

Rie won the 100 metres and 400 metres events at the Olympic Games in August. Twice she broke Olympic records.

Olympic judges said that in two or three years she would probably become the world's fastest swimmer. But by then Rie counts on being a model Dutch housewife, with a home, maybe in Rotterdam, and a blond Dutch husband.

"I cannot think I have a swimming future," she said "because when we are married I shall swim in public no more."

Patriots Will Beat Anarchists Who Murder Liberty

WHEN the Empire of the Tsars fell, Russia had, for a few months, her only democratic regime. It was crushed by the Bolsheviks.

Head of the defeated democratic Government was Kerensky.

He knows too well the methods of the Reds which drove him into exile 19 years ago.

And here, in an interview with a London newspaper he gives his view—founded on his unique experience—of what has happened, is happening, will happen in Spain.

By ALEXANDER KERENSKY

(The Russian Premier whom the Reds expelled)

I AM certain that the patriots will emerge victorious from the Spanish civil war.

This will not mean the defeat of the "Frente Popular"; it will mean that the Spanish democracy, caught between the cross-fire of two extremist movements, will perish utterly.

I know Senor Azana (the Spanish President), and he stands high in my esteem. It is, however, to be deeply regretted that he was not able to keep the extreme left-wing under control.

It is the fashion to accuse the Socialists and Democratic regimes of preparing the path for Fascism. This is not true.

It is always the Communists who, attacking and weakening the Democratic Party, assure a victory for those of the extreme right. The origin of all Fascist dictatorships has invariably been the same. After the first Communist revolutions in Hungary and at Munich brought about temporary Bolshevik control, I felt sure that Fascism would engulf all those countries where Moscow's intervention in governmental affairs was tolerated.

RED BID

Nazidom owes its ascent to power to two direct causes; one, the moral and economic bankruptcy of Germany subsequent to her defeat in the Great War, and second, and far more important, to the Communist bid for control.

In Spain, Largo Caballero, the present Premier, started hatching Communist conspiracies as far back as February. A group led by Indalecio Prieto openly opposed him. The more moderate leader wanted to bring him to reason. Useless.

"You know that the strength of the right gathers from day to day," Prieto warned Largo Caballero. "Then look out. If you continue your policy catastrophe."

THE CAUSE

To-day we are witnessing, helplessly, the work of this malign influence. It is not a revolution, but a war provoked by the blindness of Bolshevism. And in a war there is no doubt that victory will always go to the military.

In Spain the Patriot troops possess an incalculable advantage over the Government forces. They are soldiers and their trade is war.

The militiamen are nothing better than improvised soldiers. They will not withstand a long campaign; they have neither the discipline nor the equipment of their adversaries.

Guns cannot be replaced by courage, and Madrid must fall.

ANARCHISTS

The liberty of Spain will pass away in flames.

I accuse Largo Caballero rather than Franco of having started the civil war.

One might get to understand the Socialists and even the Communists, but what about the Anarchists? They are impossible people.

With their wanton lack of discipline they respect neither the freedom of the individual nor the institutions for the maintenance of freedom.

While destroying the framework of society, they also destroy him whom they would rescue from State slavery—the individual himself.

In France, too, the danger is certainly very great.

But I cannot formulate an opinion upon the future of France. I can only hope that in following a strong democratic tradition France will save herself from the disasters which extremists of the right or left would cause.

I hope that the Socialists, the Radicals and the Moderates of the Labour Party will succeed in forming a central block which will check the activities of both Communist and Fascist.

Abroad, the Soviet agents profess the most perfect liberalism and instigate the formation of Popular Fronts, while in their own country flourishes the most tyrannical of dictatorships, as was demonstrated by the recent Zinoviev trial.

Democracy is not yet dead—look at the Scandinavian States and, above all, at England. There they have managed to avoid the Communist peril and retained their time-honoured democratic institutions. Those nations have not had to adopt a red or black or a brown dictatorship.

And you cannot tell me that Britain's insular position makes her different from the rest of Europe. On the contrary, I believe that to-day it is she that represents the genuine European spirit.

And do not forget this—Bolshevism always signifies disaster.

Alberta 'Dividends' £1 To £2

Calgary, Alberta, Nov. 10. The Government of Alberta announces the immediate opening of credit houses throughout the province where basic dividends will be paid—starting in three weeks' time—to 360,000 registered citizens.

Government authorities state that the dividends are to be £1 to £2, not the £3 a month promised during the elections.

Mr. William Aberhart, the Premier, says he will ask the Canadian Government for a loan of more than £200,000 to meet accruing bonds, but Mr. Charles Dunning, the Dominion Finance Minister, declares that no loan will be given to Alberta or any other province by the Federal Government, and that this is clearly understood by all State Premiers.

Ex-Kaiser As Ideal Squire

THE ex-Kaiser would have made the ideal English borough councillor.

E. F. Benson gives this opinion on Germany's William II, in "The Kaiser and English Relations," published by Longmans. He says:

"Destiny had been cruel in ordaining that a man of his temperament should be emperor of a great nation."

"Throughout his reign he had never shown any grasp of the serious responsibilities of kingship."

"His happiest years were in exile. If only Providence had consecrated him to be a squire of ample means and estate just outside some county town in England, what a pleasant and useful existence might have been his."

"His defects, vulgar in a monarch, would have been merely humorous and even endearing."

REFORMER

"As a member of the borough council he would have proposed a hundred reforms."

Mr. Benson imagines the ex-Kaiser in the card-room of the county club laying down the law to his partner at bridge and soon afterwards revelling amid general satisfaction.

"He would have been president of the local cricket and golf clubs, would have contributed large pictures to the annual art exhibition, and got up penny readings in his village, reciting the more famous passages in Shakespeare's plays," he says.

CHINESE ART
DISPLAYEXHIBITION OPEN IN LONDON

London, Nov. 18.
An exhibition of fifty-one paintings by T'ung H. Chiu, the husband of Mr. T. V. Suong, sister-in-law, was opened to-day by Mr. Quo Tai-chi, the Chinese Ambassador, at a gathering of the Fine Arts Society. Chiu generally adopts the Western style of painting, but with a distinct Chinese feeling. The pictures are chiefly landscapes and they cover a wide variety of scenes, from Peking to Scotland. The artist will spend the winter painting in Morocco. Reuter.

rhythmical pattern, and you must study every speech until you find out what this pattern is. The following sentence gives a simple example of the use of inflection. "He came up the stairs, walked along the passage, opened the door, and with a violent push smashed his way into the room." The three introductory phrases must be spoken with an upward, and the climax with a downward inflection, the result being that the rising note gives a feeling of suspense, and the downward one rounds off the climax. This principle of contrast must be applied to all speeches.

Verse needs a greater amount of variety than prose, and the best way of studying inflection is to read passages from the plays of Shakespeare, as part of the daily practice, until correct inflection becomes natural. Closely linked with inflection is tone. The tone in which you speak a sentence can entirely alter the meaning. Try saying the words "come in" (as if someone were knocking at the door) in as many different tones as you can think of. Without altering inflection or stress you will be able to suggest anger, anxiety, hope, fear, impatience, and many other emotions or reactions, and by looking out for places in your part in which changes of tones can be introduced you will be able to improve the dramatic effect of your words greatly.

TRAM ACCIDENTS

TWO REPORTED
YESTERDAY

An unknown Chinese woman was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital yesterday suffering from injuries received when she was knocked down by a tramcar outside the Central Fire Station, in Des Voeux Road. The woman met with the accident by suddenly running across the road, in front of the oncoming tram.

Another Chinese, a man, Chan Chui, 24, was also admitted to the Government Civil Hospital yesterday, suffering from injuries received by falling off a moving tramcar opposite the Central Market. Chan attempted to board the car while it was in motion. He was knocked unconscious by the fall.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

EVERYWHERE IN LIFE, THE TRUE QUESTION IS, NOT WHAT WE GAIN, BUT WHAT WE DO.—Carlyle.

Miss Margaret Harmsworth, daughter of Sir Leicester Harmsworth and niece of Lord Rothermere, arrived in Hongkong yesterday by the s.s. Patroclus. Miss Harmsworth is travelling with Sir James and Lady Owen and a party who are on a round-the-world tour.

Pan Chun, 30, unemployed, appeared before Mr. K. Keen at the Central Magistrate's Court this morning, charged with the unlawful possession of five pairs of children's stockings. Defendant admitted the charge and was bound over in $25 to be of good behaviour for six months. Inspector Hopkins prosecuted.

Charged with maliciously wounding a fellow-Sikh named Jang Singh, a police guard, Sher Singh, 53, was remanded for 48 hours when he appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning. Inspector W. R. Chester Woods said the wounding was done with a chopper early on Wednesday morning in the third floor of 384 Portland Street. The police were instructed to oppose bail, as the wounds were very serious.

Li Shek-ming, 20, unemployed, appeared before Mr. K. Keen at the Central Magistrate's Court this morning, charged with (a) stealing a quantity of house fittings from No. 24 Robinson Road and (b) for having in his possession a screw-driver fit for an unlawful purpose. Defendant admitted the charges and was sentenced to two months' hard labour on the first count and one month's imprisonment on the second. Det.-Sergeant Bentley prosecuted.

A European, J. Richards, was taken to the Government Civil Hospital last night suffering from a wound across the nose. The injury is stated by the police to have been caused by two other Europeans.

The Old Blues annual dinner will be held at the Gloucester Hotel on Tuesday, November 24, at 8 p.m. for 8.30 p.m. Old Blues who intend to be present have not yet informed Capt. R. L. K. Allen, General Staff Office, H. M. Naval Dockyard, are asked to send their names to him at once.

For disobeying a traffic signal whilst riding a push-bicycle in Des Voeux Road Central yesterday, Lo Chi-kong, 23, was arrested and brought before Mr. K. Keen at the Central Magistrate's Court this morning where he was fined $10. Defendant was bailed out on that amount. Inspector Hopkins prosecuted.

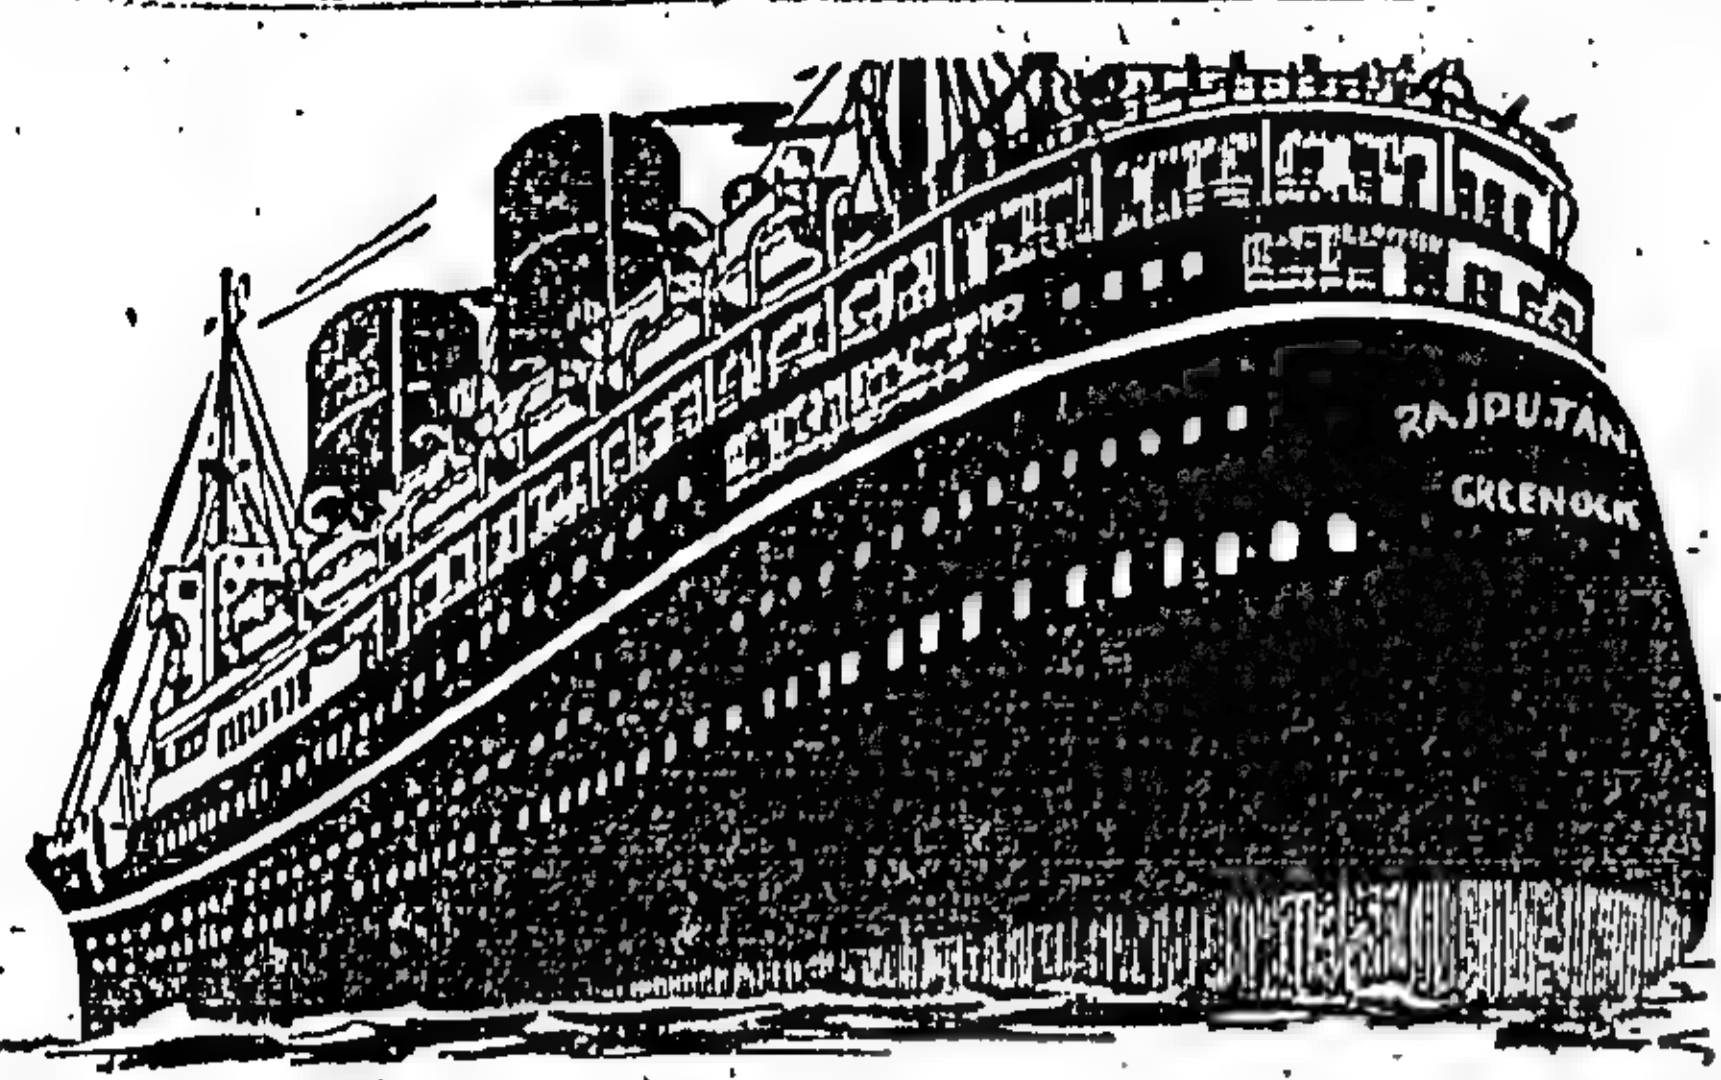

A 72-year-old man, Wong Cheung, was brought before Mr. K. Keen at the Central Magistrate's Court to-day, charged with having stolen two cast-iron pans, valued at 84 cents from Chan Yau of 127 Jervois Street. Defendant pleading guilty, the charge said that he was driven to steal because of hunger. He was bound over in $50 for one year. Inspector Hopkins prosecuted.

George Gilbert, had been commanded to dine with the King in the railway coach in which His Majesty travelled down to Wales last night and which is his headquarters during two days' stay there.

At Boverton Co-operative Farm which when the land is ready for intensive cultivation in the Spring of next year, will be conducted on a profit-sharing basis, the King was keenly interested in a model village of 60 houses which forms part of the settlement.

PACKED CROWD

Crowds surged close around the Royal Car when the King arrived at Pontypridd and police had to link arms to make a way to the hall in which a physical training display was given.

At Seaby Village the centre for a short course training for unemployed men was visited and the men were at a lunch when the King arrived. He caused much amusement by rapping on the side of the hut and asking in the manner of an orderly officer: "Any complaints?"

At Merthyr Tydfil immense crowds filled the streets and received the King with tremendous enthusiasm.

It was at the King's own request that he included a visit to the small and hard-hit town of Dowlais where a steamer across the main street carried the words, "This town is poor but loyal!"

Later stages of to-day's tour took the Royal visitor to Aberdare and other villages and everywhere he was received with a tumult of cheering.

Owing to the interest shown by the King in various social movements his timetable was less strictly adhered to than usual with Royal visits and the day's tour concluded behind schedule.—British Wireless.

STRIKE ENDS ABRUPTLY

WHEN BIG GOODYEAR PLANT IS CLOSED

Akron (Ohio), Nov. 18. The Goodyear Company's No. 1 plant has been shut down by a "sit-down" strike, which sort of last night in the tyre room and later spread to other departments, whereupon the Company turned back the morning shifts and closed the plant.

The cause of the strike has so far not been given.—Reuter.

The "sit-down" strike has now ended.—Reuter.

Picture of a man who is KIND to his face

Yes, this man uses Williams Shaving Cream—that's why he smiles as he shaves.
Williams is made from the finest ingredients, made as only a century of experience can dictate how. That's why Williams lather is so mild, so "yellow," yet so efficient. It is lather for the face as well as for the beard. It soaks thoroughly, smooths the path of the razor, ensures a clean, close shave without smart or pull. Finally, it leaves your face fit, supple, refreshed. Williams is economical too. A little of this choice cream makes a lot of lather... Men who know Williams will have no other.

Gale Strikes Britain

LIFEBOATS' HEROIC ADVENTURES

London, Nov. 18. Several shipping casualties are reported as the result of a 70 m.p.h. gale which swept the southern part of the North Sea and the English Channel to-day.

Fishing vessels off the Norfolk coast were forced to return for shelter.

The crew of ten of the Glasgow steamer Yewbank, 621 tons, were rescued by the Winterton lifeboat after the vessel had been driven ashore near Great Yarmouth this afternoon. The Colchester lifeboat, which also went to the Yewbank's assistance, was struck by terrific seas and two of the crew washed overboard, but were rescued by ropes. The lifeboat's steering gear was wrecked, but she ultimately returned with a temporary rudder.

A small drifter with all eight members of her crew, sunk off Great Yarmouth. Other small craft were driven ashore, but the crews were saved.

JAPY RISKS LIFE TO TAKE OVER-LOADED PLANE OFF FROM H.K.

a.m., and remained there until his departure.

Astonishing Speed

The astonishing rapidity with which he has crossed the world since his departure from Paris on Monday is like a Magic Carpet story.

He flew direct from Paris to Damascus on Monday. Staying at Damascus only long enough to refuel, he hopped off for Karachi, where he arrived at dawn on Tuesday. At 7 a.m. he was again in the air, arriving at Allahabad late in the afternoon.

Sleeping only 15 minutes sleep while his plane was being refuelled, M. Japy departed from Allahabad at 8 p.m., and arrived at Hanoi, after a remarkable direct flight across country, at 10.55 a.m. yesterday. He was in the air again at 12.30 p.m., completing the flight to Hongkong in 164 minutes actual flying time, easily a record.

He lost half-an-hour between Allahabad and Hanoi, by overshooting his mark.

Packed With Petrol

The machine M. Japy is flying is his own. It is a Caudron Simoun low-winged monoplane, fitted with a Renault engine, and is capable of over 200 m.p.h. The machine is similar in many respects to the De Havilland Comet in which C. W. A. Scott and Campbell-Black won the Melbourne Centenary Air Race. Although it has accommodation for three people, all the room, except the pilot's cockpit, is occupied by specially fitted petrol tanks.

Japy recently came into prominence when, with Maurice Arnoux, he crashed at Kurachi while leading in the Paris-Salgan air race. The remarkable undercarriage of their machine jammed, and they creled the field for 35 minutes until their petrol became exhausted, when they made a crash landing.

M. Japy has not received the communication, stated to have been sent by the Japanese Minister of Communications, forbidding him to fly direct from Hongkong to Tokyo.

He is emphatic that, if weather conditions appear suitable when he reaches Foochow, he will attempt the hazardous overseas crossing from there.

If he arrives at Tokyo at 6 p.m. to-night, the actual elapsed time since he left Paris will be 64 hours, easily a record. The actual flying time will be approximately 58 hours.

Stomach Sufferer's Own Warning Against 'Rubbishing Imitations'

The really marvellous effects of Maclean Brand Stomach Powder in all cases of stomach trouble have led to the introduction of cheap substitutes. Many sufferers who have been cured feel it their duty to warn other sufferers to guard against accepting anything but the genuine Maclean Brand Stomach Powder that put them right. Mr. P.S.L. who writes "after three years of frightful torture—I was restored—to perfect health by Maclean Brand," continues: "To everyone I tell this story. I have to explain how all over the country there are rubbishy imitations. It is only your persistent advertising that warns people of the damage that misunderstanding may mean."

When there is so reliable and successful a remedy as Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, the one with the signature, it is foolish to accept any cheap imitation. Your most precious possession is your health. Dare you endanger it by taking something which looks like genuine Maclean Brand, but is nothing like it in exact balance and purity of ingredients?

Your sure safeguard is the signature "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" on every carton of the genuine Maclean Brand. Look on seeing the signature if you want to be certain of relief for your suffering. Maclean Brand Stomach Powder is most and best. Powder or tablets in bottles in cartons. If any difficulty in obtaining write to: Barker & Co. Ltd., P.O. Box 535, Hongkong.

THE DYSENTERY
INVESTIGATIONS

Now that there is a welcome diminution in the number of cases of dysentery, the public generally will harbour the hope that the epidemic, which has taken such a heavy toll of infant life, is definitely on the decline. Complete reassurance, however, is not yet possible, and in the meantime residents will do well to refrain from the consumption of uncooked foodstuffs, of unpasteurised milk, or of unboiled water. The continuance of precautions is essential until the cause of the outbreak has been definitely established. Exhaustive investigations are known to have been instituted by the health authorities, but the problem is one which, for a variety of reasons, cannot be solved quickly. Certain preliminary conclusions have already been reached, and the deductions therefrom are being carefully analysed. One of the biggest handicaps which investigators face in enquiries of this kind is that by the time the tests from suspected sources are complete, the milk, water or food which may have become contaminated has already passed into circulation. It is quite possible, of course, that the disease may have been transmitted by a carrier who is himself unaffected. The authorities have gathered detailed data in regard to every case so far reported, and in the near future a preliminary official statement on the result of the investigations may be expected. So far as making dysentery a notifiable disease is concerned, it is understood that there are some difficulties which would have to be overcome, but there seems no reason why compulsory pasteurisation of all the Colony's milk supplies should not be enforced. These two points will, with others, no doubt receive the early attention of the Government. Steps will also, we have reason to believe, be taken to pursue further enquiries on the possibility of infection by carriers, as well as on other aspects of what is a most complex problem. The public may therefore rest assured that the whole matter is being explored, with a view both to checking any further spread of the disease and to preventing the occurrence of a fresh outbreak. It is essential, however, that, for the time being at any rate, due safeguards should be taken by the community along the lines already indicated.

THESE MEN REFUSED TO BE COWARDS

Capt. McCullagh

CAPT. Francis McCullagh, Irish journalist, is one of the most famous living war correspondents. Always on the spot when upheavals break out, he was special correspondent for the New York Herald during the Russo-Japanese War; New York Evening Post correspondent during the Portuguese Revolution in 1910, when King Manuel abdicated, at Agadir in Tripoli; in the Balkan War, (in which he was captured). After serving in the World War, he went to Russia. Was captured by the Bolsheviks while retreating with Kolchak's army. After release, went to Moscow in 1922 but was expelled for his reports of the trial of Mr. Cielplak.

Spain Next:

Lenin's Prophecy

Trained Bolshevik agitators have been pouring into Spain since February last, and one of them stated last spring that, on a certain date in the month of July, Hell would be let loose in Spain. He even gave the exact date. General Franco was right in declaring war on Hell, before it declared war on him.

Karl Radok, one of the leading Bolsheviks, told me once at dinner in the British Embassy in Moscow that Spain would be the first country in Europe to go Red. I laughed at his prophecy, or rather, at Lenin's prophecy, for Radok was only repeating a famous sentence uttered by Lenin, who believed that ultra-Catholic Spain was as safe from Bolshevism as ultra-Catholic Ireland.

But he was right. He had seen the secret reports that came from Spain to the Kremlin, and he had seen the commiss-vorogues of revolution who had actually been in Spain.

Later on I became aware of the intense and silent activity of the Russian Bolsheviks in the Iberian Peninsula, and now that I look back on that internal activity in the light of present happenings, I shudder, for it seems to me like the silent, indefatigable activity of "death beetles" eating away the timbers supporting the roof of an ancient building.

I also see clearly now the extraordinary influence that those Russian professors of revolution had over their Spanish pupils. Their extreme and fiendish cruelty is Russian. Their burning of churches and monasteries is Russian. Russian also is their habit of exhuming the bodies of dead nuns from convent cemeteries, a habit which is incomprehensible to Western Christians, for the Catholic Church does not claim, as the Orthodox Russians do, that the bodies of all saints are incorruptible.

To prevent the ruin of all the children, and to prevent the establishment in Spain of a Soviet Republic, the Spanish Christians struck. Were they wrong in striking? Should they have waited for, say, Mr. George Lansbury, to have given the word? Then they would have waited for ever.

Justification

For Rising

The circumstances in which they struck have not been made clear by the military leaders, in the first place because none of them has shown the journalistic aptitude of the Reds; and in the second place because all the accounts we have had so far of the origins of the war, have come from Madrid, and bear traces of Madrilenian mendacity. Even honest and impartial correspondents have been unconsciously influenced by the atmosphere of Madrid.

Everything hinged on the fact that the Spanish Reds never honestly accepted the Republic. They wanted to make it a stepping-stone to a Soviet dictatorship, and now they have got their dictatorship, based on the bryony of the Red militia, which is a Bolshevik to a man. President Azana may sign decrees and perform other official antics, but power rests with the Reds.

Even in the middle of July the Reds overruled the Cabinet of Senor Casares Quiroga, and this fast led to the disturbances that broke out all over the country about that time. By July 10, those disturbances had become so serious that Senor Casares Quiroga resigned, whereupon the President summoned the Speaker of the Cortes, Senor Martinez Barrio, to form a Cabinet of moderate Republicans.

Had this Cabinet remained, the Army would have been satisfied, because it included one man whom they could trust, Senor Sanchez Roman, who had objected to the association of the Cortes, Senor Martinez Barrio, to form a Cabinet of moderate Republicans.

It Was a

Red Revolution

But the Marxists smashed this Cabinet immediately, whereupon Senor Azana recalled the Casares Quiroga Cabinet, thus acting unconstitutionally, for the Communists had no right to override his prerogative.

The composition of the new Cabinet pleased the Bolsheviks so much that they determined to support it by armed force, and at midnight on Saturday, July 18, armed patrols of boots that in history there is no such thing as an irresistible movement, that a strong, determined man can break the road to revolution, that one is never conquered till he believes that he is conquered.

Speaking of Philip II, he adds that "no example is more comforting than his, or more efficacious against the depressing suggestions of pessimism and of historic determinism which kneels down like a coward before the accomplished fact, or the simple appearance of force."

Which brings me back to the position from which I started, that the Spanish Reds did not follow the mystic motto of the Slav, did not kneel like cowards before the accomplished fact, or the simple appearance of force, but struck back at once.

The Spanish Christians will save against the Government, his Spanish shield, consequently they are Loyalists, and their opponents are Rebels.

Let me pause here to remark that the idea of the Popular Front, which admittedly came from Moscow, proves that there lives to-day in the Kremlin a revolutionary chief who is far subtler and more dangerous than his predecessor, the real revolutionary chief who lies embalmed in the Red Square.

It is an idea of genius, for it enables a small united group of Bolsheviks to dominate a large, disunited body of Socialist, Radicals, Liberals, Nationalists, Separatists, and Trade Unionists, and finally to treat them with utter contempt.

Capital Seized

Illegally

To return to the illegal seizure of the Capital by armed Reds. The Union Militar Espanola was not so hilly as the army of Kerensky. It had decided beforehand on what to do in case the Reds seized power. It had concocted a very good plot.

Now, of Conservative plots in the Iberian Peninsula I happen to know something, for about a quarter of a century ago I was acquainted with some of the Portuguese monarchists who were trying to restore King Manuel to his throne. I went a number of times to Spain and Portugal in order to chronicle their counter-revolution and to share in their expected triumph.

I spent weeks in Tury on the Portuguese frontier, waiting for their column to march. I spent weeks in the Vigo waiting for their arms to land. I spent a long, dreary time in Lisbon; I was in Montevideo, in Azana may sign decrees and perform other official antics, but power rests with the Reds.

But this Spanish plot was altogether different. To obtain almost simultaneous action at so many different points was indeed a feat. Once again I take off my hat to the Hidalgo.

But the reader must not think that this was exclusively an army matter. Among the rebels there are more civilians than soldiers. Practically all Spain, save Catalonia, is on the side of revolt.

Nobody can foretell the issue, because nobody knows how far the Communist rot has gone in Spain. If only Catalonia and the Asturias and a few of the large cities are affected, all will be well. Spain will save Europe from Bolshevism as she saved Europe from Islam. The Don will be the matador destined to finish off the mad bull of Moscow.

Refused to Cover

Before Force

Louis Bertrand, a French Academician and a great authority on Spanish history, says very truly in one of his books that in history there is no such thing as an irresistible movement, that a strong, determined man can break the road to revolution, that one is never conquered till he believes that he is conquered.

Speaking of Philip II, he adds that "no example is more comforting than his, or more efficacious against the depressing suggestions of pessimism and of historic determinism which kneels down like a coward before the accomplished fact, or the simple appearance of force."

Which brings me back to the position from which I started, that the Spanish Reds did not follow the mystic motto of the Slav, did not kneel like cowards before the accomplished fact, or the simple appearance of force, but struck back at once.

AMATEUR ACTING

Words in Season to the Beginner

By GERARD FAY

Second Article

AFTER breathing, the most important point is enunciation, which brings all the vocal organs into play. If you open your mouth wide and say "ah" without moving the tongue or lips, you get an indistinct sound which in no way can be made to suggest a word. Only by making that sound has been modified by bringing the teeth, tongue, and lips into action can it become a word.

This process is so natural and so rapid that it is impossible, without going into considerable detail, to describe exactly what happens to sounds when they are being converted into speech. The best way to study the mechanics of diction is to get hold of a good book on elocution in which a detailed description of the construction of the mouth and vocal organs will be found. It is not advisable to take too much notice of elocutionary books on the subject of dramatic interpretation, for their technique is more applicable to the concert platform than the stage.

Be careful of over-enunciation, which may be caused by a too faithful following of the old tag "take care of the consonants and the vowels will take care of themselves." If the words of a sentence are chopped up and the syllables over-emphasised, the speech becomes stilted and forced. Usage allows certain sounds to be slurred in order to gain in naturalness—for instance, the word "certain" is correctly pronounced "cert'n" and not "cert'ain." A sense of proportion is required in enunciation in order to achieve the medium course between carelessness and pedantry.

THE RESONANT VOICE

out of the throat. The shape of the mouth is such that it acts as an "expansion chamber" for the sounds produced by the vocal organs, giving them the strength and resonance which will carry them over the distance from the stage to the furthest seat in the auditorium.

Resonance in speech must be developed if the voice is to be effective, and here again the elocution book will be useful in giving exercises. It is a curious belief amongst many amateurs that the time spent in rehearsals and the actual public performance of the play is sufficient to give practice in the technique of acting. This is quite absurd.

All good actors practise movement and diction apart entirely from rehearsal, although the legitimate stage has, in the last few decades, fallen far behind the music-hall and variety theatre in this respect.

When you think of the hours of practice devoted to the perfection of vaudeville acts, or the learning of a piece of music, the few hours given to study by actors become significant. Since amateurs generally make only sporadic appearances, practice is even more essential to them than to professionals. Half an hour a day of practice in speech and movement should be the minimum for the conscientious amateur.

GOOD PRONUNCIATION

Pronunciation has to do with the values to be given to different sounds in order to produce a pleasant, musical, and cultured accent.

The only sure guide to good pronunciation is that it should be free from all localisms and affectations. Neither the "West End" nor the "Oxford" accent is good English, any more than Cockney or Lancashire accents are. It has been said that the best King's English is spoken by the King himself, and most people who have heard the King speaking over the radio will be inclined to agree.

The most desirable accent for stage purposes is what is rather vaguely known as "Standard English," or, in good exponents of this type of speech, who will serve as models to amateurs, are such actors as Charles Laughton, Florn Robson, Cedric Hardwicke, and Robert Donat, to mention only a few.

Apart from super-sophistication and other annoying poses, the English spoken by some of the B.B.C. announcers may be accepted as a good standard. The most important thing to remember in acquiring a good stage accent is that the pronunciation must be learned until it becomes involuntary, for any imitation of good manner cannot produce a pleasant form of diction.

The combination of soft lights, comfortable seats, and a high temperature produces in an audience a distressing tendency to lapse into unconsciousness, and keeping the spectators awake is one of the first duties of an actor. If the voice comes in a steady drone, the unattractive effect will be heightened instead of lessened, and it is therefore necessary for the player to achieve a constant variety in his speech.

AVOIDING MONOTONY

Inflection is the principal means of avoiding monotony. You must not allow your voice to stay for too long on the same note.

A well-inflected speech is rather like a song. There is a definite.

Orsborne Says He Fled Africa After Fight With Blacks

AFTER the Girl Pat left Corcubion, Spain, on her runaway voyage from Grimsby, Captain Orsborne and his crew sailed straight into new adventures.

Orsborne, telling the story at the Old Bailey last month, when he resumed his evidence, recalled how they put in at Dakar, on the West Coast of Africa, had a fight with natives, left in a hurry and made the voyage across the Atlantic, reaching Devil's Island in 16 days.

From Devil's Island they went to Georgetown, British Guiana, reaching there on June 19. They were arrested, but released, and Orsborne attended the Governor's reception on the King's birthday.

Later, said Orsborne, he sold his story for £5,000. He and the man who wrote part of it—in the form of a statement—had seven or eight bottles of beer and some rum together, so he, Orsborne, was not too clear about it.

FEARED BOARDING

He began by telling how, after leaving Tenerife, they passed some ships flying the Italian flag. Italian cruisers were boarding all ships on the Moroccan coast, and he was afraid they would board the Girl Pat. The Italians did not, and the boat called at Port Etienne, where it ran on to some sand banks. They were there three or four days before they could get it off.

They then made for Dakar, where they were for about three days, and the stores had then finished. They asked for Lloyd's agent, but did not see Mr. McLean until an hour and a half before they sailed.

The boat had then no food on her, and they got supplies from Devil's Island for a month.

They were only 400 miles from Georgetown, and it took them a few days to reach there.

BECAME KIA ORA

"We painted a name on the bridge—Kia Ora—so that vessels should find it from a distance. We did not want to be stopped by foreign ships again. There was already a French cruiser circling after us," said Orsborne.

When they were satisfied it was British territory they scraped the name Kia Ora off.

As they approached Georgetown an airplane flew over and dropped a message asking if they were the Girl Pat. He signalled back that they were.

Next morning the Pomeroon (a river passenger boat), with 30 or 40 armed black policemen or soldiers on board her, tried to go alongside.

"She smashed the ship's side in as they tried to board," said Orsborne. "As we got close to harbour our oil ran out and we asked for a tow and they towed us in. I went ashore and later that day made a statement to the police. We were arrested the next day at one o'clock."

Mr. Christmas Humphreys, (one of counsel for defence): For what were you arrested?—I don't know.

RECEIVED BY GOVERNOR

On June 23, which was the King's birthday, did you attend a reception at the invitation of the Governor, and thereafter were you told something about your story in connection with the Girl Pat?—Yes.

What had your offer been?—I offered to carry on and take her back to England.

Was that offer accepted or refused?—I got no answer.

Orsborne said that he made arrangements to fly to America and catch the Berengaria to England from New York. Ginger Stephens and Harris, (two of the crew) came back.

The charge against you is of stealing the Girl Pat. At any time had you any intention of depriving the owners permanently of that vessel?—None at all.

Mr. Paley Scott (prosecuting) began his cross-examination by asking Orsborne if he had proposed to fly to America and come home by liner.

Orsborne: Yes. The passage was already booked.

Who was paying for the airplane?—I had sold the story of the Girl Pat for £5,000.

To whom?—To the Anglo-Continental.

Is that a company publishing the People newspaper?—No. They have newspapers all over the world as far as I know.

On what day did you sell these rights?—The second day after we arrived, June 20.

Did you sign a contract?—I did.

Was there anything paid on account?—Yes, 200 dollars.

Is that all you have had so far?—Yes.

Did a Mr. Holliswell, representing the People, bring Harris and Stephens home?—No, he met them to get their story. He represents Odham's Press.

NEVER READ IT

Mr. Justice Singleton: When did you sell it to them?—I sold it to the Anglo-Continental, who resold it to the People.

Mr. Scott: May we take it that the story in the People is the story that you had sold?—I could not say it was my story.

Did you tell the writer the story of your voyage in your own way, and answer questions to somebody representing the Anglo-Continental Press?—Yes.

Have you seen the result as published in the People?—I never bothered to read it.

Do you say that seriously?—Yes, I never read it.

Since the People took it over, have you still received no more than 200 dollars?—No, sir.

Mr. Justice Singleton: Has any one on your behalf to your knowledge?—Yes, the men have been getting £5 a week.

Mr. Scott: What share are the other men to have in this £5,000?—I gave the other four £1,000 each.

Have you not been making regular remittances to Harris and Stephens ever since they got home?—No. The solicitors have, Constant and Constant.

£5 A WEEK

Mr. Justice Singleton: The solicitors in this case?—Yes.

How many times have they been paying to you every week?—Five pounds.

You don't suggest they are paying that out of their own pocket?—No. They are paying it out of the £5,000.

Mr. Scott: This ship made rather an extended voyage for a ship of this size and type?—Yes.

How many thousand miles did you go?—Approximately, with the tacking to get on courses; I should say just on 8,000 miles.

She appears, at any rate, to have been seaworthy when she left Grimsby?—No, not seaworthy.

What was it then that kept her afloat—your faith and skill?—Whether a ship is seaworthy or whether she will stand the punishment of the sea are two different things. The build of the ship was good, but the mess the ship was in was bad.

Tell me, why did you leave Dakar?—We had to leave Dakar.

'DARE DEVIL DOD'

You were ordered to remain, were you not?—I got no orders.

What I am putting to you is that you had to leave because you dare not stay, that they recognised you as the Girl Pat and you had to go away?—We had to leave owing to some trouble with the niggers.

Did you tell the gentleman from the newspaper that you went behind an island which hid you from the shore and altered the shape of the ship?—You cannot come out of Dakar without being behind an island.

Did you tell him you were known as Dare Devil Dod?—No.

Mr. Justice Singleton: Are you known as that?—I don't know. I am just known as Dod, that's all.

Are you saying definitely that Mr. Moore (Mr. Tom Moore, managing director of the Marstrand Fishing Company, owning the Girl Pat) told you to throw that ship away?—Well, yes. He said so in his own words.

What are the clearest words in which you say he ever said that to you?—He wanted us to make the biggest trip she possibly could make.

Don't all fishing ship owners want that?—You only make one trip like that.

Mr. Justice Singleton: Which ship are you talking about?—I am talking about the Gipsy Love (also owned by the Marstrand Company).

Did you tell the man from the People that when you left Grimsby you had decided on the adventure which has puzzled and fascinated the world?—No.

Captain Orsborne agreed that he had made a statement to an official in Georgetown. He signed it, although it was not read over to him.

BEER AND RUM

Mr. Scott read a passage from the statement: "We pulled out of Dover with storm signals against us with the intention of scuttling the ship."

EMPIRE MIGRATION

HOPE OF EARLY REVIVAL

London, Nov. 18. An interesting report of the Overseas Settlements Board issued to-night states:—"On a preliminary view of the situation, we are encouraged to think the improvement of economic conditions overseas, and the migration that the idea of Empire migration is being viewed with growing favour in the Dominions, points to the probability that certain overseas Governments may be prepared to co-operate in schemes for a gradual revival of assisted migration along certain lines in the reasonably near future. We are actively pursuing enquiries in this direction. We have no doubt a desirable that legislation necessary for agreements involving commitment beyond May 31, 1937, should be enacted as soon as possible to empower the Secretary of State to co-operate in migration schemes for the settlement of surplus persons from the United Kingdom within the Empire overseas."

The Committee suggests that in schemes of development or land settlement the British Government's contribution should be restricted to 50 per cent, whether the partner in the scheme is a Government or private organisation. It is suggested that the amount expended in any financial year should be limited to £1,500,000—a figure considerably in advance of the sums expended under the former Act. The Act, it is suggested, should be operative for fifteen years.—British Wireles.

TYPHOON WARNING

The Manila Observatory reports that there is a typhoon in about Long, 146, Lat. 10, moving west.

Captain Orsborne said: "The official wrote that in his own words."

Mr. Justice Singleton: Did he write down what you told him?—No.

Did you sign the statement containing that passage?—Yes, but I never mentioned "scuttle" to that man at all.

Captain Orsborne added: If you don't mind me saying so, I had seven or eight bottles of beer and several drops of rum, and so had the official who wrote down the statement, and how it has turned out in this way I don't know.

Mr. Scott: Did you ever intend to scuttle this ship?—No, I never did.

Captain Orsborne further cross-examined, said that he had to leave Dakar because of the niggers.

NO ROCKETS

Mr. Scott: You left in terror; what were they going to do with you?—The same as they did with the white magistrate a week before.

James Orsborne then gave evidence.

In answer to Mr. John Flowers, K.C., said the thought of stealing the Girl Pat never entered his head.

"Twice an attempt was made to do fishing," said James Orsborne, "but it was not successful as the winch would not pull the gear back. We got the anchor down and could not get it up because the winch would not pull it up."

They discovered that there were no rockets in the ship when a storm blew up before they went into Dover.

"Dod said, 'It looks as though Moore intends to get rid of the ship and the crew too.'"

Mr. Paley Scott asked James Orsborne: "Look at your brother. Have you ever stopped him from doing anything he wanted to, or are you ever likely to?"

HIT A 'NIGGER'

James Orsborne: We got on very well together.

Mr. Scott: But you have to go his way, not he yours?—I would not say that.

Orsborne said they had to get out of Dakar because the niggers were after them.

They had a bit of a row in a barber's shop. One of the niggers talked about "white pigs." His brother resented it and hit the man under the chin. The barber had to sneak them out the back way, and next day the niggers came round the ship wanting their revenge. They were armed with clubs.

Mr. Scott: Isn't it a fact that one of the things your brother had in his mind was fishing for pearls?—No, that's silly.

Hunting for treasure on a coral island—was that in his mind?—It is fantastic imagination.

Is it true that some one gave you a plan of a treasure island?—Yes, we still have it, a rough plan in pencil on a piece of paper.

Do you believe it to be genuine?—No, none of those things ever are.

800 PURSUERS

John Hector McDonald Harris, of Highfield Avenue, Grimsby, a 32-year-old seaman, was the next witness.

He denied that he said to the landlord of an hotel at Grimsby, "One word from me and down goes both of them."

Mr. Scott asked Harris how many niggers were after them at Dakar.

Harris replied: "Seven hundred or eight hundred armed with sticks and all sorts of things." (Laughter.)

He said that the crew were very hungry when they got to Devil's Island. They caught some flying fish on the way.

The trial was adjourned.

LOCAL CINEMA DISPUTE

ENGINEER CLAIMS DAMAGES

Alleging he had been prevented from earning his living by the detention of his film apparatus, Cecil Ng Wing-lee, a sound recording engineer, brought a claim for $1,000 against the Eastern Film Company, before Mr. Justice J. J. Hayden in the Summary Court this morning.

Plaintiff claimed the return of two Bell and Howell 400 feet film cameras and six Reflex camera slides which he alleged were detained by the defendant company and the total value of which was $355, as well as damages for their detention and special damages limited to $500.

A counter-claim for $204.00 was brought by the defendant company, $100.00 being cost for 5,400 feet of film alleged to have been damaged by plaintiff, $30 paid to plaintiff in advance for his work, and $54 being expenses payable by plaintiff. They denied having detained or taken possession of the articles mentioned.

Mr. G. S. Hugh-Jones appeared for plaintiff, and the defendant company was represented by Mr. M. C. McCallum.

Opening the case for his client, Mr. Hugh-Jones said that plaintiff was a sound recording engineer and defendant were producers of sound films.

CONTRACT CONCLUDED

In the early part of June this year, plaintiff was introduced to defendants by a certain Mr. Torres and negoti-ated a place whereby it was arranged he was to act as sound recording engineer for the company.

A test was held sometime before June 5, which proved satisfactory. In consequence of this, a contract was drawn up between the parties, the contents of which were that plaintiff was to supply a camera and other necessary apparatus for photographing and recording sound for the production of a Chinese film of a length of 1,500 feet or more at a price of 20 cents per foot.

Work was started on a certain Chinese film on June 6 when 300 feet of sound film were expended. These films were later found to have been damaged and a further 700 feet, comprising 350 feet of sound and 350 feet of photographic film, were shot on the same day. According to plaintiff, these 700 feet were also spoiled, but not due to his fault.

The following day, another 1,000 feet of both sound and photographic film were expended. These proved satisfactory, and a further 500 feet were shot the next day. After this last expenditure of film, plaintiff's claim arose.

Continuing, Mr. Hugh-Jones said that plaintiff's claim was that while he was on the set, one of the servants of the defendant company took away the articles mentioned in the claim for the purpose of developing the films expended in them. Since then, despite repeated demands, the articles had not been returned.

Plaintiff then gave evidence, corroborating the statement of his solicitor. He added that the picture was entitled "Sang Lit Kwan," and work on it was commenced in a cow farm in Kowloon City.

On July 4 he went to the Grand Theatre, Wanchai, to see the picture and found that a large portion of the film was recorded by him.

The case is proceeding.

SILK EMBROIDERY STOLEN

SALESMAN YIELDS TO TEMPTATION

A commission salesman, Cheng Ngan-ho, 24, formerly a shop field employed by the Lai Yang Embroidery Co., of 62 Canton Road, was bound over by Mr. E. Himsworth at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning on a charge of theft of $141.85 worth of silk clothing belonging to Wong Cheng-to, master, at present in Swatow.

Det.-Sergeant Haynes, prosecuting, said complainant's chief clerk, Cheng Muk-kun, accountant and share-holder in the company, had advised that the silk embroidery which defendant had taken out a few days before was gone for good. He reported the matter and defendant was arrested on information a few days later.

In Court, defendant declared that he had taken the goods to Macao to sell them, and on the way a friend had stolen the whole lot. He offered to lead the police to the friend's house, situated at 130 Canton Road. The goods were found there, but the friend told the police that defendant had left a local letter and case on a few days before and he had not been informed as to its contents.

Defendant's employer gave evidence of defendant's good character for the past two years during which defendant had been working for him. His witness considered the offence as a result of a temporary lapse and bound defendant over in $20 for one year.

WHY KNEE-ACTION WHEELS?

HERE ARE THE FACTS ON CHEVROLET KNEE-ACTION

Each front wheel is independently sprung, "stepping over" bumps with easy riding action. Knee Action wheels make the back seat as restful as the front, eliminating "back seat pitch."

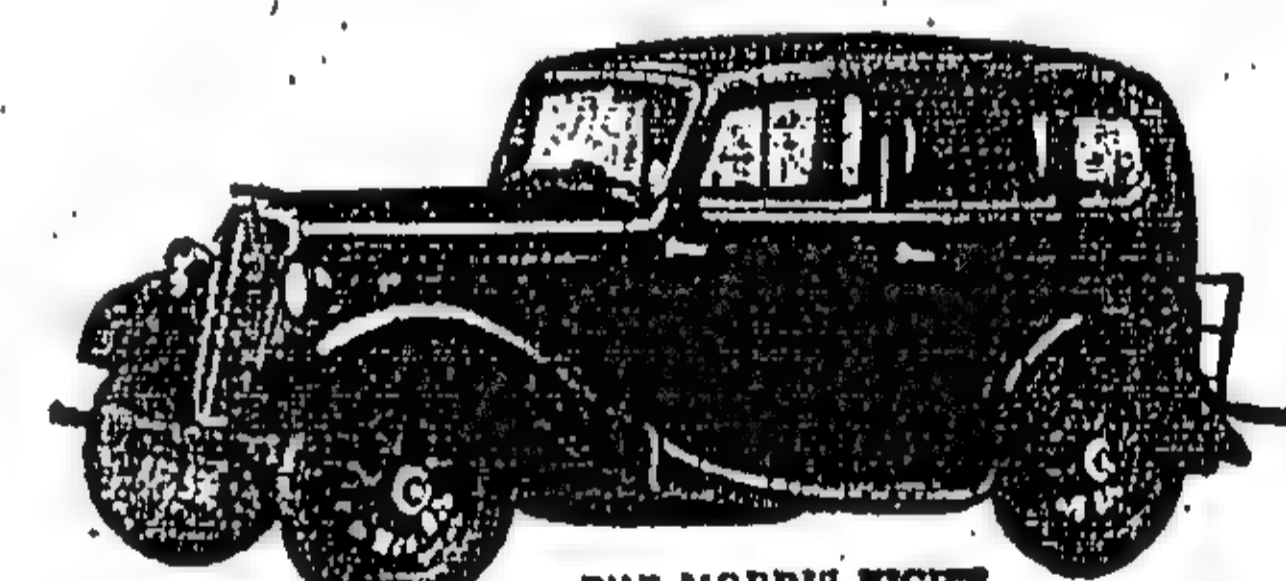

The Chevrolet type of Knee Action is much safer, permitting faster speeds on rough roads and preventing the car from "swaying" or "skidding."

Water, ice and stones cannot affect Chevrolet's Knee Action. Chevrolet Knee-Action permits the wheels to move straight up and down, preventing "tyre scrubbing" and giving longer tyre life.

HOW ENGLAND BEAT IRELAND International Football

London, Nov. 18. England beat Ireland in an international football match at Stoke today by three goals to one, after the teams had crossed over at half time with a goal apiece to their credit.

Over 40,000 watched the game in ideal weather, though the ground was heavy after recent rain. The team turned out as originally advertised and Ireland won the toss.

They opened briskly, the Irish attack displaying resourcefulness and speed which had the English defence in difficulties.

But the English forwards were the more dangerous in front of goal and in the first minute Johnson fired in a fast ground shot which Fulton, left back, saved on the goal line. Later the English goal nearly fell during a brief siege, but Male cleared from under the bar.

Garner of Sunderland opened England's account in the 31st minute, netting with a header from Worrall's centre, but Davis of Oldham replied for Ireland 12 minutes later, beating Holdcroft with a terrific drive from close range.

England resumed strongly after the interval, with the forwards working together very methodically, making a strong contrast to the spasmodic Irish raids which were easily repulsed.

For the last 20 minutes of the game Ireland were penned in their own half. Bastin put the home team ahead in the 70th minute, and five minutes later Worrall, after a combined movement between Johnson and Steele, made the issue safe.

Although well beaten Ireland went down fighting gamely. Johnson, Worrall, Bastin, Gee and Britton were outstanding for England, while Davis made a resourceful leader of the Irish attack, and Breen's goal-keeping was a feature.—Reuter.

C. B. Wong and J. H. Luo (rec. 15) beat Y. H. Tang and K. M. Lee (rec. 13/3) 5-7, 6-1, 6-4.

Second round:—She and Yeo beat A. Fung and S. T. Chau 6-0; W. J. Howard and W. Zimmerman (owe 30) beat Peter Lo and K. Cheng Yeo (rec. 15) 6-0, 6-4; Wong and Luo beat W. H. Wei and O. L. Pang (owe 30) 6-3, 7-5.

TAM KONG-PAK

Gave spectators one electrifying moment.

FARCICAL FOOTBALL MATCH

At Caroline Hill LAUGHABLE

(By A Special Correspondent)

S. China "A" 0 S. China "B" 0

Yesterday's postponed league football match between South China "A" and "B" at Caroline Hill resolved itself into a "slow bicycle race" type of game, the object apparently being for both teams to do their utmost to miss goals.

Under these conditions the "B" team just about won: they lost some 25 goal-scoring chances to the "A" team's 20 odd. But as the football league take notice only of goals scored, the result was a draw, which delighted everybody except the spectators.

It was a painful, almost discreditable exhibition. No serious efforts were made to get the ball into the net, and it was not surprising to see half of the onlookers leave the ground in a disgusted frame of mind at half time.

The teams certainly succeeded in maintaining their individual unbeaten records, but it cannot be said they enhanced their prestige in the process.

Once or twice Lai Shui-wing overstepped the mark, forgot his role, and started to play true form. His efforts were greeted with baleful glances from the rest of the players, who quite clearly regarded the inside right as a renegade. However, they soon put Lai in his place by playing havoc with his passes. Thus cooled they continued to indulge in passing back tactics when a yard from goal, or kindly putting the ball on the toes of an opponent. It was all very, very friendly, though it was a little disappointing that the game never quite attained the furious excitement of a croquet match. Perhaps that is to be reserved for their second meeting.

There was one electrifying moment in this match: Tam Kong-pak decided to move from right back to centre-forward. What could it all mean? asked what spectators there were left. But if they thought it might lead to a goal they were sorely disappointed. True there was a bit more flourish in the "A" team attack, but it didn't amount to anything more, and for the most part, the quiet complaisant tone of the game proceeded to the bitter end.

Incidentally Royal Ulster Rifles and the Fusiliers weren't a bit upset about the result. Both benefited to a certain extent, for it helped to consolidate their positions in the league table.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION IS THE CAUSE

Objections Are Not Likely

Awtar Singh, star Kowloon Indian Tennis Club centre-forward, has decided to quit his present team and to apply to the Mamak League Committee for permission to transfer to Radio Sports Club, his old club.

I had a conversation with Awtar Singh about this during the week. He said he was resigning from the K.I.T.C. because of a difference of opinion with some of the players.

His position so far as transferring to the Radio Sports Club is not altogether clear as he has already played for K.I.T.C. in the Mamak League this season.

Nevertheless I do not imagine the Mamak Committee will place any obstacles in the way of his transferring. As a matter of fact it would be a fine sporting gesture on the part of the K.I.T.C. to agree to his transfer, without which Awtar Singh will be prevented from playing for any other club in the Mamak League.

Awtar Singh did not participate in last Sunday's game, but judged by the score, K.I.T.C. did fairly well without him. The champions have at the moment the best record in the tournament, but I do not think the exclusion of Awtar Singh will materially hinder the club's prospects.

It is to be hoped for Awtar Singh's sake that things will be satisfactorily arranged.

Lieut. F. de O'Costa, "Father" of hockey in Macao, snapped as he was going on the field to referee a recent match. His team met and beat The Royal Corps of Signals, Hongkong, last Sunday.

CAER CUP GAME

St. Andrew's Attack Was Weak

HONGKONG LADIES ON TOP

Hongkong Ladies garnered further Caer Cup points at the expense of St. Andrew's last week, winning on the U.S.R.C. ground by two goals to nil.

The losers started in whirlwind fashion and had the ex-champions pinned in their own half for the first ten minutes. But their efforts were not crowned with success, and Hongkong, slowly recovering, finally managed to take control of the game.

Miss Pope was always prominent at centre-half, and she was largely instrumental in the superiority asserted by the Hongkong team after the first quarter of an hour.

It was a neat movement which led to the first goal. Mrs. Prophet received from Miss M. Smalley and pushed the ball out to Miss C. Ferguson, who went on to beat Mrs. Juse with a slow shot which the custodian attempted to kick clear, but missed completely.

This reverse had the effect of putting St. Andrew's on their toes, and they went back to another series of smart attacks which fully tested the opposition.

GREAT CHANCE MISSED

Immediately after the interval Miss P. Gittins, Saints' centre-forward, made a splendid break-away and actually had the goal at her mercy; but she hesitated too long and instead of putting her side on level terms as appeared inevitable, allowed Miss J. Smalley to cut in and clear. After this St. Andrew's appeared to lose heart, and there was a noticeable falling away in all departments.

It therefore came as no surprise when Mrs. Harrop took a pass first time and scored with a fast rising shot past a crowd of players.

Miss M. Smalley, Miss Marsh and Mrs. Harrop combined well for the Hongkong team and constituted a dangerous attack. Miss Pope and Miss J. Dalziel did good work in the half back line, and while Miss Grey was the better of the two backs, Miss J. Smalley was very safe in goal.

Though they had a goodly share of the game, St. Andrew's, never, with one exception, looked like scoring. Miss P. Gittins played a lone game, although Miss F. Wong tried hard on the right wing. Miss J. Wong was not quite up to standard at centre-half, though I believe she felt unwell before taking the field. Miss J. Humphreys were a good account of herself at right half and was well backed by Miss G. White in the last line of defence.

CAN PLAYERS BE MOVED FROM TEAM TO TEAM?

Query Raised By Some Mamak League Competitors

CAN a club which has two teams in the Mamak Tournament shift "B" team players into the "A" team? This is the question now being asked by a number of players, and the reply seems to be in the affirmative.

Actually there is no rule governing the position, but as "B" teams are generally recognised as being inferior to "A" teams, there does not seem to be any tangible reason why "B" players should not be put into senior teams.

At the same time it is certainly essential to guard against the possible practice of transferring "A" players to "B" teams. To do this would not be "hockey". At their last meeting the Mamak Committee decided to leave the question to the discretion of club secretaries, but I think I can state authoritatively that the committee would very soon sit up and take notice if clubs started to abuse the privilege.

It just isn't done!

Pyara Singh Scores Four Times For Champions

SOLDIERS' TEAM OUTPLAYED

Four goals by Pyara Singh was the feature of the Kowloon Indian Tennis Club's five-nil victory over "D" Company, Royal Ulster Rifles in a Mamak Tournament match last Sunday.

Pyara Singh opened his account within the first few minutes, when he converted a pass from Pinto, and he added another before the interval.

The soldiers came more into the limelight during the first five minutes of the second half, but they were repulsed and K.I.T.C. took up the running with the result that Pyara Singh, who was in irresistible form, sent Noronha away, who in turn passed in to Pyara Singh to score No. 3.

Thereafter the Indians were always in the picture and a penalty bully gave Pyara Singh his fourth chance which he quickly seized. Pinto, who was off form most of the game added the fifth.

A. P. Sousa played exceptionally well, his accurate passing being a feature, while Tara Singh, Pereira and Pyara Singh were always in the limelight.

The soldiers were valiant rather than skilful players. But the defence was not too sound and appeared at a loss to deal with the clever Pyara Singh. The goal-keeper was easily the best performer for the losers.

Sketch of the new covered tennis courts at Torquay

England's Biggest Covered
Tennis Courts

The erection of three covered courts at the Palace Hotel, Torquay, is another concession to the growing demand for lawn tennis by day and night and whatever the weather, and will at last provide a centre for covered court play in Devon.

These new covered courts adjoin the hard courts and are the last word in covered court construction. There is a clear floor space of 120 feet by 120 feet, and the roof is higher than that of any other court in England, and as there are no supporting pillars it allows space for three courts. Lighting by day or night is shadowless.

The floor is of American white wood, painted green, the wood which has been found to give the nearest bound to that of a good grass or hard court.

The spectators are well provided for in galleries round the courts, tip-up seats are provided, and there is room for over a thousand people to watch the play. The building includes dressing-room accommodation, and there is in addition a first-class restaurant. The cost was in the neighbourhood of £12,000.

A. C. Roberts is the resident professional available for coaching lessons or practice.

At the official opening of the courts on November 14 and 15, exhibition matches were played, in which D. W. Butler, C. E. Hare, G. P. Hughes, H. G. N. Lee, F. H. D. Wilde, Miss E. A. Dearman, Miss F. Jones, Miss B. M. Hindwick, Miss M. Hareley, Miss N. M. Lyle, and Miss Dorothy Round took part. Mr. H. Roper Barrett performed the opening ceremony.

FRIENDLY HOCKEY
Kowloon Indians Beat
Navy "A" Team

In a friendly hockey match played on the Hongkong Hockey Club ground at King's Park yesterday, the Kowloon Indian Tennis Club senior team defeated a Navy "A" eleven by four goals to one.

The Kowloon Indians played with only ten men in the first half, which ended with the score at 1-1. A reserve turned up, however, in the second half, and then the Indians had matters much their own way, three more goals being registered. The scorers were Pyara Singh and J. M. Pinto, each of whom netted twice.

Play was fast throughout.

8th Destroyer Flotilla Lost to Club

In a friendly hockey game played at King's Park yesterday, the Club defeated the 8th Destroyer Flotilla by four goals to all. The game was fast and exciting and had it not been for H. F. Shields, the goalkeeper, and R. L. Wallace and E. V. Reed, the full-backs, the Club would probably not have won so easily. These players put up a sound game and were largely instrumental in preventing the sailors from scoring.

B. I. Bickford opened the score for the Club almost right from the commencement, and before the interval S. A. Fowler put them further ahead.

Shortly after the resumption G. E. R. Divett increased the score to three goals in favour of the Club, and just before the end, Fowler scored again.

A bright attack, but Miss F. Best was the leading luminary, her efforts on the right wing being very impressive.

The Recreio were clearly at a loss on the uneven grass surface after becoming accustomed to a sand pitch, and most of the players were unsettled by this. However Miss O. Botelho and Miss C. Osmund put up a stout defence and were bravely assisted by Mrs. L. Silva and Miss P. Xavier in the half back line. Miss C. Silva and Miss M. Rozo were the pick of an intelligent attack.

TOURNAMENT

Members of the Argonauta hockey team are anxious to know whether it is within their rights to strengthen their present team which is to represent the Civilians against the Army and Navy in the Inter-Section tournament.

They possess two or three very good players who have played for Recreio in the Inter-Section competition.

tion, but who are also members of the Argonauta Club, and the question is whether these are now eligible to play for the Argonautas in this tournament.

Since the Civilian half of the tournament is over I can't see that it would matter if these Portuguese players were included in the Argonauta eleven.

I would certainly hesitate before offering a dogmatic opinion on the question, but I think it worth the while of Argonautas to bring it before the Hongkong Hockey Association for consideration.

If you are throwing a Cocktail party

these hints will save you money, help to make it a success

WHEN loads of unrepaid hospitality weigh you down a cocktail party is really the best way out. First thing to decide is how many people you want to ask.

Next, of course, comes the question, "What's it going to cost?" Laziest and most expensive way of giving a party is to put it in the hands of the caterers. For 8s. a head you will get unlimited drink (you guests have eight cocktails to choose from), a dozen different sorts of cats, a bar and burman, glasses, crockery.

Much cheaper, though, if you do the ordering yourself. Running only one sort of cocktail, you can figure out the cost pretty well. Suppose that you have chosen a Martini. A good mixture is:

1 dash of orange bitters.

1-6th gill of Italian vermouth.

2-6ths gill of dry gin.

This half-gill recipe will adequately fill a cocktail glass. There are roughly fourteen cocktail glasses to the litre.

Now, a 12s. bottle of gin holds two-thirds of a litre and a 4s. 6d. bottle of vermouth a litre. It follows that three bottles of gin and one of vermouth should provide you with 42 cocktails, the cost of which will be 37s. 6d.

Just how many cocktails your guests drink depends partly on how long they stay and partly on how cocktail-conscious they are. Clearly four each is a generous allowance.

If you run two cocktails (and it is a good plan to have one sweet, one dry, cocktail), the cost is more difficult to calculate, but, at any rate, it should be possible to get your drink on drink-or-return terms.

One of the nicest—and easiest—of sweet cocktails to make is a "Doctor." The recipe is ½-gill fresh lemon juice, ¼-gill orange juice, ¼-gill of caloric (Swedish) punch.

Sausages are popular

After drinks, the cats. If you must economise, economise on them rather than on the drinks.

You ought to consider the smart hors d'oeuvres (caviare, foie gras, etc.). They work out at 4s. 6d. a dozen. Same sort of thing enclosed in brioche rolls rather less showy come for 2s. 6d. a dozen, olives at 1s. 6d. a bottle.

Those little sausages are popular; you get about 30 to the pound, and they cost 2s.

In the biscuit line try the various Japanese sorts, and those long twiggy ones smeared with beef-tea paste. Next the invitations. Don't invite your guests just as you run into them: one expensive way you'll ask too many. Make a list. Ask them all at

Glasses and ash-trays

Allow three glasses to every two guests. So many people forget where they have put their glass when filling up time comes, or else they change from one drink to another.

Have plenty of cigarettes, matches, ash trays. See that the ash trays are emptied during the party. The atmosphere will get thick enough without the odour of stale cigarette butts. Cover your high-polish furniture with American cloth. Get plenty of ice.

If possible, leave the front door open for arriving guests. Have notices where to put hats and coats. Do as much cocktail mixing as possible before the guests arrive (or hire a barman for a guinea).

Your party will be a success.

Cigar Test

BEST way to test a box of cigars is to sample one. If it goes out or the ash falls it is badly made, and does not smoke smoothly.

If it seems hot it is loosely packed. If it draws badly it has been too tightly packed. Do not try to loosen it by rolling it between your fingers; that only makes it tighter.

Hats and Umbrellas

WHEN you come to choose a new umbrella there's certain to be a battle between serviceability and appearance.

For material you can have silk, silk and cotton mixture or cotton. Choose silk for appearance (it rolls up thinner), cotton for strength. Mixture for compromise. Your umbrella should give you at least a 4-ft. span.

For handles, leather is smart, and dark plaited most suitable. Efficient umbrellas have a metal ring which slides down the umbrella stick, over the heads of the spokes, holding them in place when the umbrella is closed.

Another good reason for the metal ring slide. You can have your name and address engraved on it. Unless you're uncompromising, you'll have a wooden centre stick. The metal tube ones look all very well—until you lean on them.

The new ferrules are horn ones—no danger of getting jagged metal edges which tear the clothes. Refinement for raccoons (or crossword puzzle solvers) is pencil let into the crook of the umbrella.

and hats

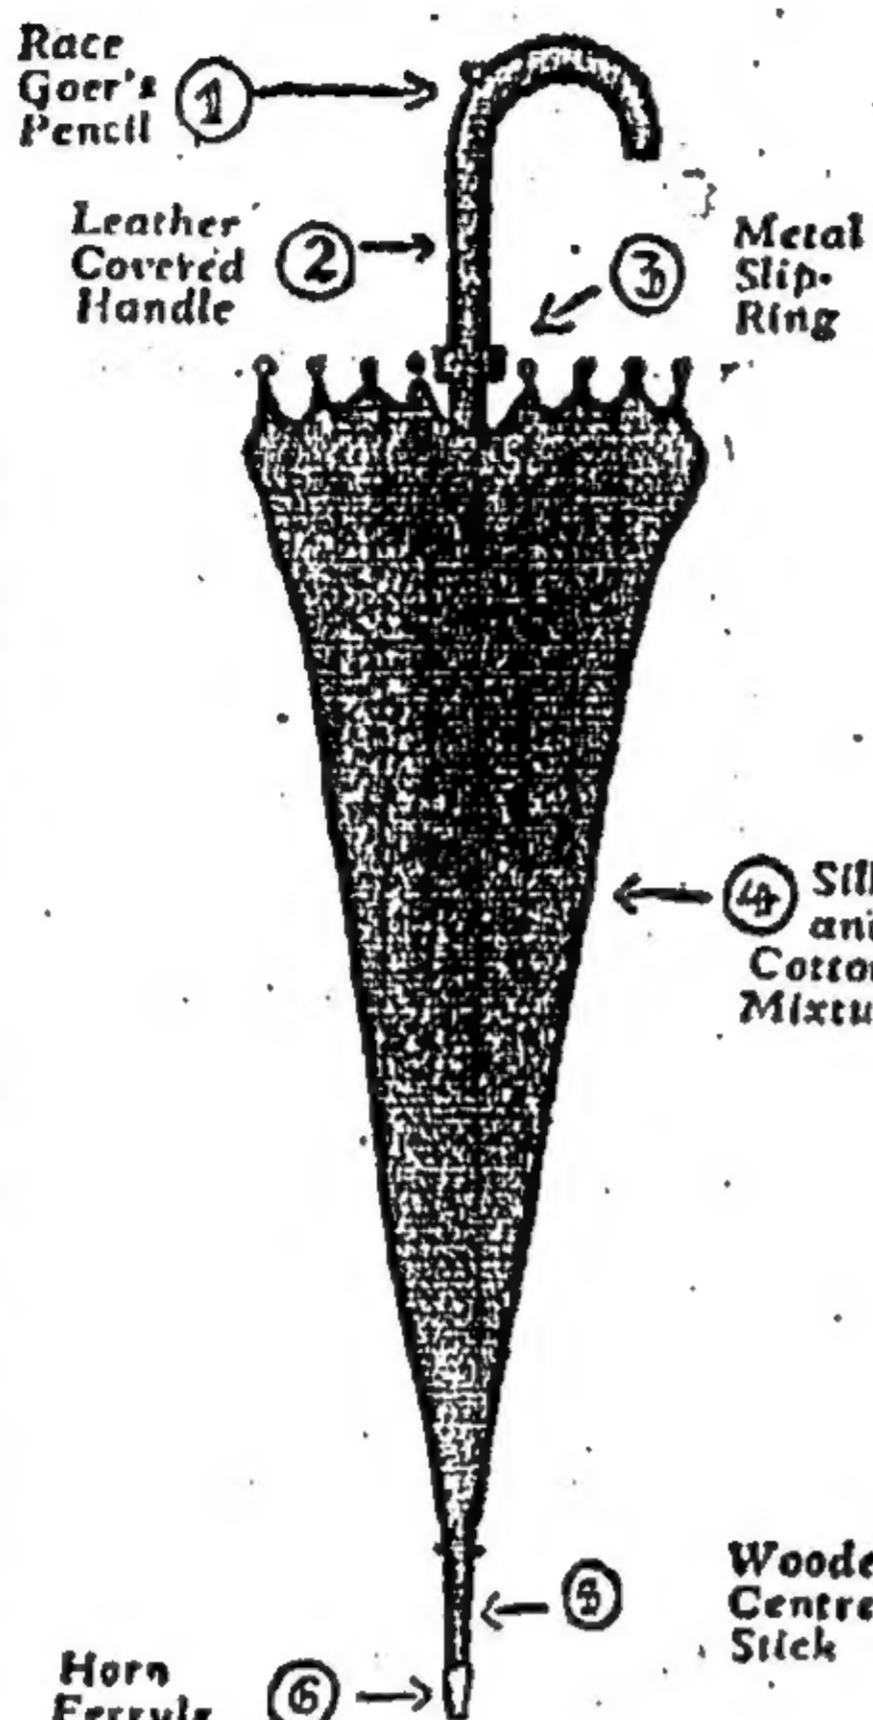

Men often blunder badly over hats. Don't do so yourself. For everyday use the choice is usually between three types: bowler, snapbrim, and "Anthony Eden."

If you are not less than average height, take one of those narrow-brim (any 1½ inch) bowlers with a crown that tapers towards the top. They look smaller than other hats with the same head room.

Snap-brim hats look larger than bowlers: they have brims ranging from 2½ to 3½ inches. To wear one you need a fairly broad face.

"Anthony Eden" hats are not necessarily deeper or wider than the average soft hat. But the elaborately curled brim certainly makes them seem so. Only tall men with large, round faces, can successfully wear them.

Remember that it's worth having your hat steamed to fit your head. If not, you'll certainly find yourself wearing a hat too small in some places, too large in others. From above most heads look like potatoes.

SELANGOR'S SUICIDE

TRAGIC END OF FRENCH MINISTER

Paris, Nov. 17.
The death has occurred of Roger Selangro, Minister of the Interior in M. Blum's Popular Front government.

It will be recalled that M. Selangro was recently vindicated by a Government Commission, presided over by General Gamelin, Chief of the French Army General Staff, of charges of cowardice during the Great War.

There was a violent scene in the Chamber of Deputies on November 13, when the Question of M. Selangro's military record was debated, about 50 delegates being involved in a scuffle, and the sitting had to be suspended.

Later, M. Selangro committed suicide. He was found in a room with windows and doors closed and gas taps turned on.—Reuter.

Mrs. A. W. Ingram, wife of the Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., is leaving Melbourne by the steamship on December 2 after a vacation in Australia. Mrs. Ingram will be accompanied by her daughter, Ruth.

GERMANY AND ITALY ACTING IN CONCERT

Move May be Attempt to Form Anti-Leftist Bloc

Berlin, Nov. 18.

Italy and Germany have recognised General Francisco Franco's revolutionary regime as the official Government of Spain; Signor Benito Mussolini and Herr Adolf Hitler have recognised General Franco as a brother dictator.

An official German communique states:

"Inasmuch as General Franco's Government has taken possession of the largest part of Spanish territory, and as developments of the last few weeks have shown always more clearly that there is no longer any question but that he will exercise governmental power over the other parts of Spain, the Reich Government has decided to recognise General Franco's Government and take up diplomatic relations with the Charge d'Affaires accredited thereto.

"The new German Charge d'Affaires will present his credentials to General Franco in the near future. The German Charge d'Affaires hitherto at Alicante will be recalled."

Meanwhile, Rome has issued an almost identical communique.

A Propaganda Ministry spokesman has confirmed that Germany is acting in concert with Italy and has decided to participate in the fall of Madrid, but he refused to say whether this action was intended to hamper Russian aid to beleaguered Leflists.

Anti-Russian Thrust

Well informed foreign circles here believe the Italo-German combination is a direct anti-Russian thrust, implying a warning that Italy and Germany will openly supply arms to General Franco if Russia attempts to interfere. Moreover, the move is seen as a bid for the formation of an anti-Leftist bloc and a warning to Russia that a continuance of her action in supplying arms to Leflists will mean a gun-running competition in which the Soviet would be at a tremendous disadvantage.

Observers believe the Italo-German action in advance of Madrid's capitulation was dictated by the necessity of halting further outside assistance before the already stern Leflist resistance is more greatly strengthened. Germany expects several other nations, especially the South American republics, to follow her example.

A Foreign Office spokesman, however, said that Germany's attitude towards the non-intervention agreement was unchanged "for the time being."

It is learned that Great Britain still regards Germany and Italy as firmly bound by the non-intervention pact obligations.—United Press.

London, Nov. 18.
The Italian and German Governments have decided to recognise General Franco's rebel Government. An Italian communique states that now the insurgent leader has taken possession of the greater part of Spain, it is continually more evident that in the remaining part of Spain it is impossible to speak of a responsible Government exercising power. The Fascist Government has therefore decided to recognise General Franco and send him a Charge d'Affaires, who is leaving immediately, the former diplomatic representatives having been recalled.

The German communique follows almost exactly similar lines and adds that a new German Charge d'Affaires is proceeding in due course to the seat of the Franco Government and that the German Charge d'Affaires at Alicante has been recalled.

The British Government, it is understood, has no intention of departing from its policy of non-intervention in Spain, in spite of the Italo-German action.—Reuter.

Recognition Anticipated

Paris, Nov. 18.
The recognition of General Franco's Government by Italy and Germany was expected in authoritative French sources, but announcement came sooner than anticipated.

Political quarters hold the opinion that the consequence may be that Germany will openly supply General Franco with war materials.—Reuter.

Right Of Search

Paris, Nov. 18.
Political circles here believe Italy's and Germany's recognition of the rebel Government in Spain was prompted by their desire to enable the insurgents to search ships bound for Barcelona and suspected of carrying arms, without violating international law.

France does not regard the mere recognition of General Franco as establishing the right of search and France will adopt the necessary measures in the Mediterranean to protect her own shipping. Simultaneously France confirms that there is no change in her policy of non-intervention.—Reuter.

Reverberations

London, Nov. 19.
Reverberations of the reports of a Japanese-German alliance are heard in the Rome rumours that Italy might join an anti-Communist alliance with the Japanese and German, recognising Manchukuo. If Japan recognises Ethiopia's conquest by Italy.

However, Parisian observers regard the Italian attitude as lukewarm to such a proposal. It is believed the recent Italo-German conference disappointed Signor Benito Mussolini, and that Herr Adolf Hitler declined to accede to the Italian programme for Central Europe, on the ground that Italy's championship of Hungary was premature.—United Press.

TUGWELL IN BUSINESS

Washington, Nov. 18.
Professor Rexford Tugwell, one of President Roosevelt's former Brain Trust chiefs, has become an executive vice-president with the American Molasses Company and does not contemplate returning to Columbia University where he was a professor of economics before the New Deal picked him up.—Reuter.

BIG GAIN IN POWER OF R.A.F.

STILL FAR SHORT OF OBJECTIVE

London, Nov. 18.

A big increase in the strength of the Home units of the Royal Air Force since May last year is shown in the latest figures available.

In May, 1935, Home squadrons numbered 33, with 530 first-line machines, whereas to-day they total 60, with 992 first-line machines.

These figures show that the Air Force has made a good start towards reaching the limit aimed at, namely, 129 Home squadrons, with 1,750 first-line machines.

The Air Ministry's plan provides for the creation of 50 new aerodromes, of which 39 are already in course of construction. The majority of these are situated in the south and south-east of England.

R.A.F. RESEARCH

London, Nov. 18.

During a further debate on defence in the House of Lords, Earl Stanhope, for the Government, said the Minister for Co-ordination of Defence was devoting attention to certain aspects of the fleet air arm, but no statement could be made until a decision on the proposals was taken by the Government. He also stated that the Government was preparing for the manufacture of gas masks at rapid rate. Distribution would be entrusted, if the occasion arose, to local authorities.—British Wireless.

FIRM FRIEND IN BRAZIL

CARNEIRO'S APPEAL TO BRITAIN

London, Nov. 18.

Senor Carneiro, Brazilian Commercial Attaché and guest at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon prior to his return to Brazil to assume the leadership of the Foreign Commercial Department, appeals in an address to-day for the continuance of a close community of interests between Britain and Brazil.

Referring to the post-war developments, Senor Carneiro said Brazil's rise among the cotton growing countries as one of the most remarkable events in the history of raw cotton.—Reuter Special.
